LINK MELLON TO SLUSH FUND

DISCOVERY OF NOTE INVOLVES CHIEF OF TREASURY IN PROBE

Borah Urges Party To Pay Back Debts To Sinclair

WASHINGTON, March 12.—The mask of secrecy, which has kept the public for five years from knowing about Harry F. Sinclair's lavish use of the Continental Trading Company's $3,080,000 Liberty bond "slush fund" to pay off deficits of the Republican party, was slowly crumbling today under the hammering investigation by the senate public lands committee.

There were a number of sensational developments following revelation of a note, in the handwriting of the late John T. Pratt, millionaire Standard Oil official, which apparently linked Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon and William M. Butler, President Coolidge's 1924 campaign manager and now Republican national chairman, to the Sinclair bond "gifts."

First, Mellon announced that he had refused to become a "phony contributor" to the party in exchange for a present of $50,000 in Sinclair bonds. The treasury head declared Will H. Hays, former Republican national chairman, approached him with such a transaction but that he rejected it, although he did make a cash contribution of $50,000.

Second, Senator William E. Borah (R) of Idaho, appealed to the Republican party, in a letter to Butler, to "tell all," repay every cent to Sinclair, and "clear itself of this humiliating stigma." He wrote the letter March 5 and Borah announced that Butler's reply was "very unsatisfactory."

Under the circumstances, it was felt Butler had refused the suggestion that Republicans raise a fund to pay back all Sinclair contributions.

Third, the senate committee again subpoenaed Hays to testify Tuesday about the facts that he withheld on his two previous appearances as a witness. The committee also invited Butler to come forward and explain why his name was pencilled on the corner of Pratt's mysterious memorandum.

The Sinclair donations to the Republican party had unusual significance because they were made in 1923, within a month after the senate began to investigate his lease of Teapot Dome. They came chiefly from the "profits" in the Continental Trading Company's deal, which the supreme court branded as "conceived in fraud." Other profits from this company went to James E. O'Neill and Harry M. Blackmer, both of whom have fled to Europe and refrained from using their "shares" because they feared criminal prosecutions.

It was the inscription of the four names—Weeks, Andy, Butler and Dupont—on the Pratt note, that smashed the secrecy surrounding Sinclair's gifts to the Republicans.

The note was Pratt's personal record of a deal by which he took $50,000 of Sinclair bonds from Hays and sent a $50,000 check to Fred W. Upham, Republican national treasurer at Chicago. Later Hays said, Pratt returned the bonds to him, so he could give them back to Sinclair. Heretofore, both the late John W. Weeks, and Senator T. Howard DuPont (R) of Delaware, whose names were on the memorandum, previously were shown to have handled the bonds for the Republicans.

GIRL ABDUCTED FROM STREET; SEEK BOYS

Springfield Girl Tells Clark County Sheriff She Leaped From Xenians' Auto And Escaped Captors.

Xenia police were searching Monday for two youths 21 and 18 years of age, who abducted a young Springfield girl from in front of the Dayton-Xenia and Springfield-Xenia traction office, N. Detroit St., while she was waiting for an interurban car Sunday night.

The girl, Lucille Buck, daughter of Dawson Buck, 773 Farlow St., Springfield, was driven in a Ford roadster as far as Possum Road in Clark County, where she managed to leap from the machine and escape from her captors.

She reported the affair to George W. Benham, sheriff of Clark County, who notified Xenia police.

One boy was described by the girl as wearing a checkered cap and dressed in light trousers, sweater and blue overcoat. His companion wore gray clothes.

LINDBERGH NEARLY WORTH MILLION BUT STICKS TO CALLING

Flyer Accumulates Wealth Within Realm Of Flying

By LAWRENCE SULLIVAN

(Copyright, 1928, by I. N. S.)
WASHINGTON, March 12.—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, still under 27, has already amassed close to his first million.

The tow-headed boy who began his climb to fame and fortune in a mail plane at two-hundred-and-something a month, has earned more in a year than most people accumulate in a life-time.

All this he has accomplished without in any way forsaking the calling which made him one of the world's greatest heroes of all time.

Although he is known to have smoked at least one cigarette, he has never indulged any brand. He does not favor any particular style of clothing or golf balls and he wears no man's collar.

Millions in vaudeville contracts have been spurred with a snap of his fingers, and millions more in movie royalties have been left for those who go in for that sort of thing. Harassed almost to distraction by airplane manufacturers, investors and operators who have offered millions to have him sit at their own glass-top desks, he has persisted in his determination never to capitalize his name for merely personal financial gain.

Lindbergh has put all his legs in one cockpit and then given undivided attention to keeping that ship on an even keel—and the money has rolled in.

Despite his longing for obscurity, he has never been able to rid himself of the Midas touch thrust upon him by Paris last May. He has run away from more millions than any man in history. But he has not been able to remain as humble in the records of the income tax division of the treasury department as in his own dashing spirit.

Most of Lindbergh's fortune, which has congealed about him at the average rate of $100,000 a month since his Paris flight, falls under the head of "earned income"—which means work for pay at the controls of the "Spirit of St. Louis." About $300,000 has come from his writings.

Two series of daily flight narratives, one from Europe and one from Central America, have netted approximately $150,000 from a newspaper syndicate.

"We," the autobiography of the congressman who came to be the acclaimed by congress, has been a best seller for months. Royalties have already amounted to close to $200,000, with publishers predicting a million sales before the present year is out. As an author, Lindbergh earned more last year than Sinclair Lewis and Willa Cather combined.

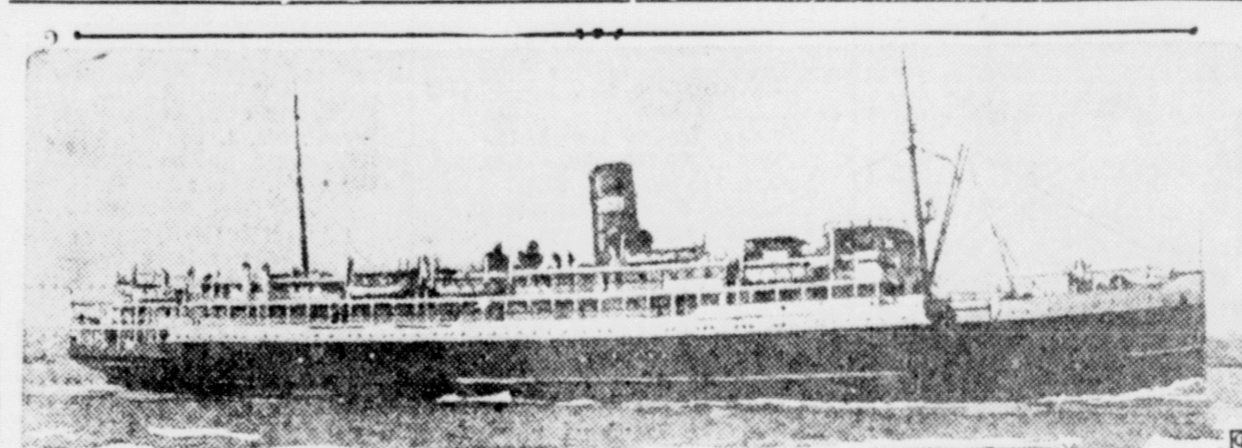

As a director of the Guggenheim foundation for the promotion of aeronautics, Lindbergh received an annual fixed fee of $100,000. His all-United States tour last fall added $225,000 more. St. Louis threw $35,000 at his feet for the Paris flight, and the Pan-American flight, undertaken chiefly as a tribute to his friend and admirer Dwight Morrow soon after the latter moved to the United States embassy at Mexico City, further swelled his income for the year.

The Hubbard medal award carried $25,000 cash and a life annuity of $5,000—equal to a cash gift of more than $100,000. The Woodrow Wilson peace award, to be bestowed this month, will bring him $25,000 more. Through it all he remains a colonel in the reserve corps, the pay of which would buy gasoline for a fellow who flew less.

Lindbergh's expenses have been paid on virtually every flight since his return to America in June. But pilots who have escorted him declare his money is no good anywhere. Hotel managers, gasoline merchants and even taxi drivers refuse to accept his cash.

His more pessimistic friends declare that his life is charmed and that, try as he will, he cannot avoid the evil luck of amassing a second million soon.

LANDSLIDE CASUALTY LIST IS PLACED AT 40; RESCUERS WORK

SANTOS, Brazil, March 12.—While an army of workers labored feverishly today clearing away the debris of Saturday's landslides from the peak of Monte Serrat, the authorities were checking up the casualties. The death list is put at about forty, but others are missing and their fate is not yet known. Between 200 and 300 persons were injured.

All night long beneath the glare of searchlights the work of tearing away the wreckage went forward in hope of saving survivors who were pinned beneath their shattered homes.

Soldiers, policemen, firemen, volunteers and laborers from nearby coffee plantations are attacking the mountain of earth and stone which roared down the slopes of the mountain upon the city with the force of a tidal wave and the thunder of a mighty artillery salvo. Private homes have been turned into hospitals. Physicians and medical supplies have been sent on special trains from Sao Paulo.

COMMITTEE REPORT TELLS OF POVERTY OF MINE STRIKERS

Document Indicts Operators For Mine Conditions

WASHINGTON, March 12.—A story of abject poverty and suffering among the thousands of victims of the soft coal strike was spread on the records of the senate interstate commerce committee today in a report submitted by the special committee which inspected the mining fields.

The document as a whole constituted an indictment of operators for permitting what was termed such "un-American" conditions to continue.

The report was replete with incidents of brutal treatment of union strikers by private coal and iron police. It also described non-union camps which were "hardly fit to house beasts, much less human beings," and condemned the activities of communists and other radicals who are preaching to strikers "the destruction of the government itself."

"Your committee believes the conditions existing in the Pittsburgh district and other coal fields in the United States are of a most serious nature and dangerous to the best interest of our citizenship," said the report.

"Your committee found no starvation in the Pittsburgh district, yet evidence on every hand was that food was none too plentiful and was of necessity the cheapest that could be purchased."

"Your committee was impressed with the courage and determination of the miners to stand up for what they believed was their due—an American wage making possible an American standard of living."

"One of the most serious conditions the committee found was the interference of the coal and iron police at post offices located at coal mines on the company property, usually in connection with its office and store."

"Everywhere your committee visited they found victims of the coal and iron police had been beaten up were still carrying scars on their faces and head from the rough treatment they had received. Your committee found more or less evidence of bootlegging in the places it visited; and in one community it seemed as if the morals had broken down entirely."

"Very little time was given to the economic side of this controversy, but we have every reason to believe that the coal industry generally is not in a prosperous condition, and we urge that the investigation by the whole committee be searching and severe in every detail looking forward to some solution by legislation that will put the great coal industry on a reasonably prosperous basis."

Committee members have indicated they favored a federal coal commission, patterned after the interstate commerce commission, to regulate the industry.

CLASS RING FURNISHES CLEW TO IDENTITY OF "MYSTERY GIRL"

Brother Says "Mary Lov O'Brien" Was His Sister—Will Take Mystery Child Born In Cleveland Hospital

CLEVELAND, March 12.—Traced through a class ring, which had been given her by a brother more than three years ago, "Mary Lou O'Brien," who died here one month ago refusing to reveal her real name, today has been definitely identified as Mrs. Hazel White Fallon, of Pittsfield, Mass.

The brother, Basil White, came to Cleveland, after reading how a high school ring his sister wore, had been traced to Pittsfield. He recognized the ring as one he had presented to his sister.

Photographs of the dead girl brought here by White were instantly recognized by Mrs. Mary Stanton of the Children's Bureau, who believed as the girl they saw die of scarlet fever in Cleveland city hospital.

According to her brother, Mrs. Fallon was married three years ago at Lenox, Mass., to James Fallon, a chauffeur. They separated last summer he said and their son, William, 2, is living with Mrs. Fallon's mother, Mrs. May, the daughter born to Mrs. Fallon here the day preceding her death, is the couple's second child. Fallon, White said, had tried to communicate with his wife. She last wrote to her family from Rochester, N. Y., it was said.

White has asked permission of Health Commissioner H. L. Rockwood to disinter his sister's body and take it to Pittsfield for reburial. He said that either Fallon or his parents would take Lois May, now one month old, to Massachusetts as soon as arrangements could be made.

SCREEN STARS TO HAVE AIRPORTS

LOS ANGELES, March 12.—Private airports! That is the newest topic of conversation along the Hollywood boulevard today.

Great and near-great in the film colony exhibited pronounced interest in the report that a new apartment hotel is projected here that will have as a more modern accompaniment to the indispensable garage an airport where the guests may keep their private air vehicles.

Linked with the reports of the proposed hostelry, which, it is said, will house mainly celebrities of the screen, are the names of Pola Negri, motion picture actress and her royal husband, Prince Serge Mdivani. They are said to be the sponsors of the project and will be among the occupants of the hotel, according to the reports.

REPORT LINER SAFE AFTER BATTLE WITH GALE OFF JAP COAST

President Lincoln Weathers Storm But Is Delayed

LONDON, March 12.—The dollar liner President Lincoln, bound from American to Japanese ports, which was caught in a terrific gale off the Japanese coast, was reported safe in advices received here today from Tokyo.

The President Lincoln, reached port about twenty-four hours overdue in a badly battered condition.

The liner put in at Yokohama. Her wireless had been carried away by the storm, preventing her from answering queries sent out from land stations.

Efforts to get in wireless communication with the President Lincoln on Saturday night and Sunday morning failed, arousing fears that the liner might have foundered in the storm.

When the wind died down sea-planes and destroyers were sent out from Japanese ports to search for the ship.

Five small Japanese vessels were reported lost in the gale.

The President Lincoln is a vessel of 14,000 tons and has accommodations for about 350 passengers.

BORAH WANTS PARTY TO REPAY SINCLAIR

WASHINGTON, March 12.—A movement to raise $250,000 by popular subscription among the progressive wing of the Republican party to repay Harry F. Sinclair, the oil magnate, the sums he advanced secretly to pay off the party's deficit after his lease of Teapot Dome appeared to be in the making today.

Senator Wm. E. Borah (R) of Idaho, has demanded of ex-Senator Wm. M. Butler, chairman of the Republican national committee, that the party itself repay Sinclair, but Butler's reply to the suggestion was characterized by Borah as "very unsatisfactory," indicating that Butler had turned it down.

"I feel that this money should be returned to the source from which it came," said Borah's letter to Butler. "We cannot in self-respect or in justice to the voters in the party keep it. To do so is to say that political parties are above the law and exempt from the ordinary precepts of morality."

SAYS HE DID NOT KNOW OF GAS LEAK

Wilson L. Compton, custodian of the Allen Bldg., Main and Detroit Sts., declared Monday that a small fire in the cellar of the building, which was extinguished without damage by firemen early Saturday morning, started when he struck a match to light the gas and that he did not know gas had been leaking.

DIES IN ESCAPE

COLUMBUS, March 12.—Oren Hill, former guard at the Ohio Penitentiary, who confessed Saturday to aiding J. L. Whitfield, negro "lifer," to escape from the institution, was bound over to the grand jury without bond here today, charged with aiding and abetting a prisoner to escape.

Whitfield died last Saturday from wounds received when he was captured at Hill's home. Hill's maximum sentence if found guilty will be life imprisonment, the term Whitfield was serving.

WEEK-END TRAFFIC CLAIMS TOLL; FIVE ARE REPORTED DEAD

Three Killed When Auto Hits Car At Columbus

COLUMBUS, O., March 12.—Three are dead here today as the result of a collision between a small auto and a Columbus, Newark and Zanesville Interurban car yesterday afternoon.

The dead are: Otto P. Hancher, 45, Washington, C. H.; Mrs. Helen Basham, 20, and Mrs. Irene Albright, 25, both of Columbus. Hancher and Mrs. Basham were killed instantly. Mrs. Albright, Hancher's daughter, died several hours later.

Hancher was driving into Columbus from Pickerington where the trio had paid its respects to the deceased child of a relative. After visiting a florist, Hancher backed into the street in the path of the interurban car, witnesses said.

The car was in charge of Conductor McKay Shafer, Zanesville, and Motorman L. S. Cory, Columbus.

CLEVELAND, March 12.—Two persons are dead, and six others today were nursing injuries as the result of week-end traffic accidents in northern Ohio. At Akron, Arthur A. Harbaugh, 53, stage manager of the Colonial Theater in that city, and his wife, Margaret, 57, were killed Sunday night when a North Ohio Power and Light Company bus collided with their automobile.

M. E. Rorabaugh, 24, driver of the bus, was to be questioned regarding the crash. He disclaimed all blame.

At Ellyria, six persons were injured when two automobiles collided. Two of the six, John Shannon, 23, and Lawrence Taylor, 20, both of Ellyria, were severely hurt. The other four, William Gillette, 21, and Robert David, 20, both of Lima, and Don Rawson, 21, and John Hagman, 21, both of Ellyria, were less seriously injured.

Police say the auto in which Taylor and Shannon were riding had been stolen from an Ellyria firm. The two men are under guard at Ellyria Memorial Hospital.

GOEBEL WILL TOUR JAPAN BY PLANE

SAN FRANCISCO, March 12.—Laying plans for a two months aerial tour of Japan, Arthur C. Goebel, winner of the Dole trans-Pacific race to Hawaii, was in San Francisco today, following a flight from Los Angeles in the new Fairchild monoplane which he intends to use in the projected tour.

Goebel is accompanied by Ernest Robinson, vice-president of the New York Aircraft Building Company which constructed the plane used by the Dole prize-winner.

PAPAL BLESSING FOR CHICAGOANS

ROME, March 12.—Papal blessing upon the people of Chicago was extended today by Pope Pius XI.

THIRD ATTEMPT TO SWIM STRAITS FAILS

LONDON, March 12.—After struggling against rough, icy seas and unfavorable undercurrents until she was within one in a quarter miles of the African coast, Mercedes Gleitze, London's typist-channel swimmer was forced to abandon her third attempt to swim the straits of Gibraltar, according to dispatches received here.

The girl entered the water at 12:10 o'clock yesterday afternoon, escorted by a number of tugs and fishing boats. At that time the weather was cold but the sea was quite calm. Later, however, the sea became rough and seriously impeded her efforts.

Miss Gleitze conquered the English channel last year after seven unsuccessful attempts. She was the first swimmer to attempt the

FIREMEN INJURED FIGHTING FLAMES

CLEVELAND, March 12.—Eight firemen were injured by flying glass and nearly fifty guests from an adjoining hotel were forced to flee in scanty attire when fire of undetermined origin swept through the five-story building of the Crouch Store and Office fixture company in the downtown district here early today.

The loss was estimated at $100,000. More than 25 fire companies fought the blaze several hours before it was brought under control.

DONAHEY'S COUSIN DIES

THREE COAST GUARD MEMBERS DIE WHILE EFFECTING RESCUE

Start Salvage Of Stranded Liner From Rocks

PLYMOUTH, Mass., March 12.—Salvage operations at the scene of the wreck of the Boston to New York liner Robert E. Lee were under way today with marine experts predicting that the steamship would be a total loss.

Meanwhile, government steamboat officials were preparing to launch an investigation of the grounding of the Robert E. Lee on rocks, a mile and a half off Manomet Point.

Captain Harland W. Robinson, who was in command of the Eastern steamship liner during he gale and snow on the evening of last Friday declared that "undoubtedly the accident was caused by a faulty compass due to severe conditions and the snow inside the pilot house."

Marines were urging the establishment of a lightship at the northerly entrance to Cape Cod Canal, contending that the gas buoy now marking the spot is inefficient. A light ship blasting her steam whistle would have prevented the wreck, they said.

Wind and rain walled a diver around Manomet Point today for the three brave coastguardsmen who met their death when a surfboat upset a short time after the big task of rescuing 263 men, women and children from the liner was completed. A fund for the families of the dead was being raised. Funeral services were conducted for Captain William H. Cashman, Surfman Frank Griswold and Surfman Edward P. Stark were the other two who died. Griswold's body not yet being recovered.

COMMITTEE REPORT TELLS OF POVERTY OF MINE STRIKERS

Document Indicts Operators For Mine Conditions

WASHINGTON, March 12.—A story of abject poverty and suffering among the thousands of victims of the soft coal strike was spread on the records of the senate interstate commerce committee today in a report submitted by the special committee which inspected the mining fields.

The document as a whole constituted an indictment of operators for permitting what was termed such "un-American" conditions to continue.

The report was replete with incidents of brutal treatment of union strikers by private coal and iron police. It also described non-union camps which were "hardly fit to house beasts, much less human beings," and condemned the activities of communists and other radicals who are preaching to strikers "the destruction of the government itself."

"Your committee believes the conditions existing in the Pittsburgh district and other coal fields in the United States are of a most serious nature and dangerous to the best interest of our citizenship," said the report.

"Your committee found no starvation in the Pittsburgh district, yet evidence on every hand was that food was none too plentiful and was of necessity the cheapest that could be purchased."

"One of the most serious conditions the committee found was the interference of the coal and iron police at post offices, located at coal mines on the company property, usually in connection with its office and store."

"Everywhere your committee visited they found victims of the coal and iron police had been beaten up were still carrying scars on their faces and heads from the rough treatment they had received. Your committee found more or less evidence of bootlegging in the places it visited; and in one community it seemed as if the morals had broken down entirely."

"Very little time was given to the economic side of this controversy, but we have every reason to believe that the coal industry generally is not in a prosperous condition, and we urge that the investigation by the whole committee be searching and severe in every detail looking forward to some solution by legislation that will put the great coal industry on a reasonably prosperous basis."

Committee members have indicated they favored a federal coal commission, patterned after the interstate commerce commission, to regulate the industry.

FIREMEN INJURED FIGHTING FLAMES

CLEVELAND, March 12.—Eight firemen were injured by flying glass and nearly fifty guests from an adjoining hotel were forced to flee in scanty attire when fire of undetermined origin swept through the five-story building of the Crouch Store and Office fixture company in the downtown district here early today. The loss was estimated at $100,000. More than 25 fire companies fought the blaze several hours before it was brought under control.

The girl entered the water at 12:10 o'clock yesterday afternoon, escorted by a number of tugs and fishing boats. At that time the weather was cold but the sea was quite calm, later, however, the sea became rough and seriously impeded her efforts.

Miss Gletze conquered the English channel last year after seven unsuccessful attempts. She was the first swimmer to attempt the Gibraltar swim, said to be more difficult than the channel because of adverse currents.

On her first attempt, December 17, she covered twelve and one-half miles of the twenty-seven mile course in eight hours. On January 2, she tried again but was forced to give up the attempt when within four miles of the coast after being in the water eleven and one-half hours.

LANDSLIDE CASUALTY LIST IS PLACED AT 40; RESCUERS WORK

SANTOS, Brazil, March 12.—In hope of saving survivors who were pinned beneath their shattered homes.

Soldiers, policemen, firemen, volunteers and laborers from nearby coffee plantations are attacking the mountain of earth and stone which roared down the slopes of the mountain upon the city with the force of a tidal wave and the thunder of a mighty artillery salvo.

Private homes have been turned into hospitals. Physicians and medical supplies have been sent on special trains from Sao Paulo.

CLASS RING FURNISHES CLEW TO IDENTITY OF "MYSTERY GIRL"

Brother Says "Mary Lov O'Brien" Was His Sister—Will Take Mystery Child Born In Cleveland Hospital

CLEVELAND, March 12.—Traced through a class ring, which had been given her by a brother more than three years ago, "Mary Lou O'Brien," who died here one month ago refusing to reveal her real name, today has been definitely identified as Mrs. Hazel White Fallon, of Pittsfield, Mass.

The brother, Basil White, came to Cleveland, after reading how a high school ring his sister wore, had been traced to Pittsfield. He recognized the ring as one he had presented to his sister.

Photographs of the dead girl brought here by White were instantly recognized by Mrs. Mary Stanton of the Children's Bureau, and others, as the girl they saw die of scarlet fever in Cleveland city hospital.

According to her brother, Mrs. Fallon was married three years ago at Lenox, Mass., to James Fallon, a chauffeur.

Summer he said and their son, William, 2, is living with Mrs. Fallon's mother, Lois May, the daughter born to Mrs. Fallon here the day preceding her death, is the couple's second child. Fallon, White said, had tried to communicate with his wife. She last wrote to her family from Rochester, N. Y., it was said.

White has asked permission of Health Commissioner H. L. Rockwood to disinter his sister's body and take it to Pittsfield for reburial. He said that either Fallon or his parents would take Lois May, now one month old, to Massachusetts as soon as arrangements could be made.

Linked with the reports of the proposed hostelry, which, it is said, will house mainly celebrities of the screen, are the names of Pola Negri, motion picture actress and her royal husband, Prince Serge Mdivani. They are said to be the sponsors of the project and will be among the occupants of the hotel, according to the reports.

That is the newest topic of conversation along the Hollywood boulevard today.

RALPH BREWER HURT WHEN TRUCK STRUCK BY PENNSY "FLYER"

Accident Occurs At Trebeins—Victim in Dayton Hospital

Ralph Brewer, 38, Wilmington, employee of the Champion Bridge Co., that city, received serious injuries about the head when his truck was struck by a westbound New York to St. Louis Pennsylvania passenger train at the Trebeins crossing, three miles west of Xenia, Monday morning at 9 o'clock. He is in Miami Valley Hospital, Dayton.

The injured man is suffering from severe lacerations about his head, but X-ray examination showed no skull fracture and he was otherwise uninjured, hospital attaches said, Monday. He will recover.

Brewer was driving toward Dayton when the accident occurred and was alone. Another truck, ahead of his machine, had stopped at the crossing, but Brewer drove around the first truck and directly in the path of the train. It is believed that he did not see the crossing lights or the oncoming train on account of the machine ahead of him.

The train struck the rear of the truck and completely demolished it and Brewer was thrown free of the machine.

The train stopped within several hundred feet from the crossing. Brewer was conscious when picked up and his injuries seemed to be confined to his head. He was placed on the train immediately and rushed to the Dayton hospital in care of Dr. Marshall Best, who was summoned from Xenia.

Brewer is married but sued his Reformatory for Women at Mansfield, who is serving a term in the field, for divorce, last Saturday.

He was seriously burned in a fire at the Champion Bridge Co. plant at Wilmington, a year ago, it is said.

HINT POISON PLOT IN DEATH OF BOYS

MICHIGAN CITY, Ind., March 12.—Arrests in connection with the strange death of Richard Bohle, 4, and his baby brother, Orville, were reported imminent by Michigan authorities today. The investigation was quickened by a report sent here from a Chicago chemist stating that traces of oxalic acid had been found in the viscera of Richard.

Meanwhile, physicians are fighting to save the life of William Sims, an uncle of the dead boys. He was stricken with the same mysterious illness a short time after his nephews had died.

Dr. Frank R. Warren, the physician who attended Richard Bohle and is now fighting to save the life of Sims, hinted the belief that he is up against a poison plot. He questioned Mrs. Sims, who, he said, admitted she had used oxalic acid to remove stains from clothing. She declared, however, there had been none of the poison in the house since last July.

BORAH WANTS PARTY TO REPAY SINCLAIR

WASHINGTON, March 12.—A movement to raise $250,000 by popular subscription among the progressive wing of the Republican party to repay Harry F. Sinclair, the oil magnate, the sums he advanced secretly to pay off the party's deficit after his lease of Teapot Dome, appeared to be in the making today.

Senator Wm. E. Borah, (R) of Idaho, has demanded of ex-Senator Wm. M. Butler, chairman of the Republican national committee, that the party itself repay Sinclair, but Butler's reply to the suggestion was characterized by Borah as "very unsatisfactory," indicating that Butler had turned it down.

"I feel that this money should be returned to the source from which it came," said Borah's letter to Butler. "We cannot in self-respect or in justice to the voters in the party keep it. To do so is to say that political parties are above the law and exempt from the ordinary precepts of morality."

SAYS HE DID NOT KNOW OF GAS LEAK

Wilson L. Compton, custodian of the Allen Bldg. Main and Detroit Sts., declared Monday that a small fire in the cellar of the building, which was extinguished without damage by firemen early Saturday morning, started when he struck a match to light the gas and that he did not know gas had been leaking.

Woman of Mystery

One of the strangest cases of identity is that of a woman found in an emaciated condition in Berlin after the World War and believed to be the Grand Duchess Anastasia of Russia, daughter of the late czar. Although the entire family was supposed to have been put to death, the mystery woman (top), calls herself Anastasia von Tchaikowsky, and has arrived in New York. Lower photo shows the Grand Duchess.

"I Wish I'd Known"

There's always a new experience ahead—something you haven't done before and which calls for a decision.

You become engaged—and immediately you are called upon to decide on the purchase of many, many things you never bought before.

You marry—and furniture, draperies, silverware, china, talking machines, oil-burners, gas-stoves, automobiles claim your dollars and call for your choice.

A baby comes—and again you face a new experience in purchasing clothes and powders and blankets; in buying a crib, baby-carriage, food, toys.

Next—what school? For the years pass incredibly fast. Once more, a new decision.

Every room in your house requires a choice. Every meal served in your dining-room results from your having decided on what to serve. Every day confronts you with a multitude of possibilities from which you must select those which make life happier and better, and make the dollars go farther.

How on earth are you going to make those decisions? How can you know what you want and what you don't want? How can you buy to such advantage that you'll seldom, if ever, have occasion to use that futile phrase, "I wish I'd bought something else"?

The Tax Commission of Ohio, plaintiff in error, against Lucy May Glass and W. R. Leach, as executors of the estate of L. D. Glass, deceased, and Alberta Leach, divorcee, defendants in error.

The weird idea of identifying the dead woman as her sister and giving her her own name—meanwhile posing under another—was born in the hope to throw the persistent McClure forever off her trail, she says.

Came to the hospital Mrs. Dorothy May McClure as Mrs. Florence Falcone, "identified" the body as Mrs. Dorothy May McClure, her "sister."

But a neighbor saw her picture in a newspaper as the dead woman's sister and recognized her as the real Dorothy May McClure. Detectives investigated and held the woman for questioning. She has been variously known as Mrs. William Gillett, Mrs. Albert Carlson, Mrs. Florence Falcone, Mrs. Arthur Gerstacker and Mrs. Leslie Buckingham.

Meanwhile, the identity of the dead woman has again become a mystery, and the fate of the baby girl to whom she had given birth, just before death, remains unsettled.

LATEST FOX NEWS AND COMEDY —MATINEE EVERY DAY 2:30

"I Wish I'd Known"

There's always a new experience ahead—something you haven't done before and which calls for a decision.

You become engaged—and immediately you are called upon to decide on the purchase of many, many things you never bought before.

You marry—and furniture, draperies, silverware, china, talking machines, oil-burners, gas-stoves, automobiles claim your dollars and call for your choice.

A baby comes—and again you face a new experience in purchasing clothes and powders and blankets; in buying a crib, baby-carriage, food, toys.

Next—what school? For the years pass incredibly fast. Once more, a new decision.

Every room in your house requires a choice. Every meal served in your dining-room results from your having decided on what to serve. Every day confronts you with a multitude of possibilities from which you must select those which make life happier and better, and make the dollars go farther.

How on earth are you going to make those decisions? How can you know what you want and what you don't want? How can you buy to such advantage that you'll seldom, if ever, have occasion to use that futile phrase, "I wish I'd bought something else"?

KENTUCKY SINGERS APPEAR AT THEATER

The Kentucky Harmony Singers, noted colored vocal group, which presented a program consisting of negro spirituals and plantation melodies at the First Presbyterian Church Sunday night, will give a public performance at City Hall Theater at 8:15 o'clock Monday night.

No admission will be charged and the public is invited to attend. An entire change of program is promised.

The group will also give a musical program at Wilberforce University Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock.

The Harmony Singers also appeared at St. John's A. M. E. Church Sunday afternoon. At this time, Mrs. Louise M. Braxton, founder of the Housewife Training School, Fulton, Ky., who is also a graduate of Tuskegee Institute, Tuskegee, Ala., spoke on the "Problems of the Housewife." Mrs. Braxton is said to be the only woman basso traveling on singing tours.

Five women singers compose the group.

YOUNG AUTO VICTIM REPORTED BETTER

Improvement was noted Monday in the condition of Isaac Smith, 9, son of Clarence A. Smith, Kennedy St., who is in Espey Hospital suffering from a slight skull fracture and scalp wounds sustained when he was accidentally knocked down by the fender of an auto driven by Victor T. Kolb, Central High School coach, on S. Detroit St., Friday night.

The fracture is located just above the forehead but Dr. Paul D. Espey, attending physician, does not believe the injury is serious. Kolb, who was driving slowly, was exonerated of blame, since the youth, attracted by the ringing of the fire bell, rushed out into the street to watch the trucks pass, running against the fender of the car.

Vanishing

Mrs. A. J. Furstenberger, her brother, Mr. George Herbert and sister, Mrs. Priscilla Campbell, and the latter's son, Mr. Carl Campbell, of Waldo, O., left by motor Monday morning for Boone Ia., where they were called by the serious illness of their uncle, Mr. Henry Duncan.

There will be a meeting of residents of Orient Hill at the school Tuesday night at 7 o'clock, for the purpose of considering proposed street improvement.

Mrs. W. E. Currie received The Current Events Club at her home on W. Church St., Monday afternoon.

Miss Nelle McKay has been confined to her home on W. Second St., several days with a severe cold.

The Rev. D. A. Sellers left Sunday night for Milwaukee, Wis., to visit until Wednesday with his son, Mr. John Sellers.

The Girls' Octette of the O. S. and S. O. Home furnished music at the Sunday evening services at the First M. E. Church, this city, and the program was much appreciated by the audience.

Mr. David P. Anderson, treasurer of Franklin County, spent Saturday on business at the office of County Treasurer Helen Dodds.

Mrs. R. C. Ferris of the Court House Barber Shop, accompanied by friends from Dayton and Cincinnati, left last Thursday by motor for New York City to attend the National Hairdressers' Association convention at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, this week.

Ruth Guild, Presbyterian Church, will be entertained at the home of the Misses Viola and May Orr, Monday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

Richard Adair, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Adair, N. Gallows St., is ill with the grip.

Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Torrence, Mr. and Mrs. James D. Adair, Dr. and Mrs. H. C. Messenger spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Armstrong III at Maysville, Ky. The women of the party remained with Mrs. Cochran until Tuesday.

Charles Harner, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Harner, near Xenia, underwent a tonsil and adenoid operation, in this city Monday morning.

CIVIC STUDENTS AT WILL TRIAL HERE

Students in the civics class at Central High School attended the jury trial of the suit brought to contest the will of Mrs. Sue Copenhaver, late of Osborn, when the hearing was resumed in Common Pleas Court Monday with the return of Judge R. L. Gowdy to Xenia from Cleveland, O., where he has been presiding on the Cuyahoga County bench.

The students, all seniors, were present for both the morning and afternoon sessions.

This is an annual custom as the high school civics class is permitted to attend one trial each school year.

The will suit was interrupted two weeks ago by the illness of a juror. After the hearing is completed, probably Tuesday, Judge Gowdy expects to return to Cleveland and will be gone until April.

GRUMLEY FARM HOME LOOTED BY THIEVES

Thieves who ransacked the farm home of W. A. Crumley, New Burlington Pike, five miles from Xenia, during the absence of the family early Sunday afternoon, stole a five-tube radio set, two shotguns, a flashlight and a sheepskin coat, according to a report made to Sheriff Ohmer Tate.

The intruders gained entrance to the Crumley home by shattering the glass of a side door and then unlocking it. No jewelry or money had been left in the house. Sheriff Tate investigated.

LOVE CURDLES LYNN, Mass., March 12—

Driven by the "love-curse," a disappointed young Lochinvar walked out of the west today. The foot-sore Romeo was William St. Clair, who had traveled from Portland, Ore., on $30. When he arrived he discovered that his sweetheart, Miss Lillian Murphy was not here. With only three cents in his pocket, St. Clair was obliged to find lodgings at local police headquarters. He was a soldier, stationed near Boston in 1925, when he first met Miss Murphy.

SHERIFF COLLECTS REWARD FOR AUTO

Reward of $50, offered by a South Bend, Ind., insurance firm, for the recovery of an Overland coach, 1928 model, stolen from E. E. Gaddis, R. R. No. 5, Wilmington, March 10, 1927, was collected by Sheriff Ohmer Tate, Monday.

Sheriff Tate, who confiscated the auto which was found in the possession of a man arrested as a fugitive from justice, spent several months trying to trace its ownership and finally completed identification of the owner February 29, only to learn that Gaddis had since collected the insurance money on the auto in the belief it would not be recovered.

The insurance firm is consequently entitled to possession of the auto. Sheriff Tate ruled and completed the exchange of the machine for the reward Monday.

FATHER WANTS POSSESSION OF CHILD FROM O. S. & S. O. HOME

Charging his daughter, Iva May Smith, 13, ward at the O. S. and S. O. Home, is being unlawfully restrained of her liberty, Robert O. Smith, Dayton, O., realtor, has instituted habeas corpus proceedings in Common Pleas Court against the Home board of trustees and Col. T. E. Andrews, superintendent, in an effort to obtain the child's release.

The father claims that he is entitled to custody of his child but that the board of trustees is preventing him from procuring her.

Smith asks the court to grant a writ of habeas corpus in order that she may be discharged from the alleged unlawful restraint.

Left homeless by the accidental death of her mother in a railroad accident, the girl was placed in the Home to be cared for by the Day-

Salts Fine for Aching Kidneys

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, sometimes get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders. You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region begin drinking lots of water. Also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is intended to stimulate them to activity. It also helps neutralize the acids in the urine, so they no longer irritate, thus helping to relieve bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which everybody should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in trying to correct kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

We Really Ought To Save More!

But how are we going to do it, query Worried Husbands and Anxious Wives? Rent is a pretty fixed charge, and heat, laundry, clothes and food cost just so much. There really is only one way—save FIRST and then buy what you must have for as little as possible.

While we can't offer you a "quick cure" for all your money troubles, may we suggest that when you pay cash you can't spend more than you have. Cash also means a substantial saving on the things you must buy.

"Quality—always at a saving" will mean more than our store slogan if you'll try our plan. It will mean a bank balance at the end of the year, and a fewer wrinkles right away.

KENTUCKY SINGERS APPEAR AT THEATER

The Kentucky Harmony Singers, noted colored vocal group, which presented a program consisting of negro spirituals and plantation melodies at the First Presbyterian Church Sunday night, will give a public performance at City Hall Theater at 8:15 o'clock Monday night.

No admission will be charged and the public is invited to attend. An entire change of program is promised.

The group will also give a musical program at Wilberforce University Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock.

The Harmony Singers also appeared at St. John's A. M. E. Church Sunday afternoon. At this time, Mrs. Louise M. Braxton, founder of the Housewife Training School, Fulton, Ky., who is also a graduate of Tuskegee Institute, Tuskegee, Ala., spoke on the "Problems of the Housewife." Mrs. Braxton is said to be the only woman basso traveling on singing tours.

Five women singers compose the group.

YOUNG AUTO VICTIM REPORTED BETTER

Improvement was noted Monday in the condition of Isaac Smith, 9, son of Clarence A. Smith, Kennedy St., who is in Espey Hospital suffering from a slight skull fracture and scalp wounds sustained when he was accidentally knocked down by the fender of an auto driven by Victor T. Kolb, Central High School coach, on S. Detroit St., Friday night.

The fracture is located just above the forehead but Dr. Paul D. Espey, attending physician, does not believe the injury is serious. Kolb, who was driving slowly, was exonerated of blame, since the youth, attracted by the ringing of the fire bell, rushed out into the street to watch the trucks pass, running against the fender of the car.

Seldom do sailing ships traverse the oceans now; less frequently barks of this cut. Gliding above is the Favell, carrying the flag of Finland home from Australia.

KENNETH MAXWELL FUNERAL TUESDAY

Funeral services for Kenneth Maxwell, 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Maxwell, Stetson Road, will be held Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Lutheran Church. Friends may call at the Whitmer Funeral Parlor, Monday evening from 7 to 8:30 o'clock.

CIVIC STUDENTS AT WILL TRIAL HERE

Students in the civics class at Central High School attended the jury trial of the suit brought to contest the will of Mrs. Sue Copenhaver, late of Osborn, when the hearing was resumed in Common Pleas Court Monday with the return of Judge R. L. Gowdy to Xenia from Cleveland, O., where he has been presiding on the Cuyahoga County bench.

The students, all seniors, were present for both the morning and afternoon sessions.

This is an annual custom as the high school civics class is permitted to attend one trial each school year.

The will suit was interrupted two weeks ago by the illness of a juror. After the hearing is completed, probably Tuesday, Judge Gowdy expects to return to Cleveland and will be gone until April.

CRUMLEY FARM HOME LOOTED BY THIEVES

Thieves who ransacked the farm home of W. A. Crumley, New Burlington Pike, five miles from Xenia, during the absence of the family early Sunday afternoon, stole a five-tube radio set, two shotguns, a flashlight and a sheepskin coat, according to a report made to Sheriff Ohmer Tate.

The intruders gained entrance to the Crumley home by shattering the glass of a side door and then unlocking it. No jewelry or money had been left in the house. Sheriff Tate investigated.

LOVE CURDLES
LYNN, Mass., March 12—Driven by the "love-curse," a disappointed young Lochinvar walked out of the west today. The foot-sore Romeo was William St. Clair, who had traveled from Portland, Ore., on $30. When he arrived he discovered that his sweetheart, Miss Lillian Murphy was not here. With only three cents in his pocket, St. Clair was obliged to find lodgings at local police headquarters. He was a soldier, stationed near Boston in 1925, when he first met Miss Murphy.

SHERIFF COLLECTS REWARD FOR AUTO

Reward of $50, offered by a South Bend, Ind., insurance firm, for the recovery of an Overland coach, 1924 model, stolen from E. E. Gaddis, R. R. No. 5, Wilmington, March 10, 1927, was collected by Sheriff Ohmer Tate, Monday.

Sheriff Tate, who confiscated the auto which was found in the possession of a man arrested as a fugitive from justice, spent several months trying to trace its ownership and finally completed identification of the owner February 29, only to learn that Gaddis had since collected the insurance money on the auto in the belief it would not be recovered.

The insurance firm is consequently entitled to possession of the auto, Sheriff Tate ruled and completed the exchange of the machine for the reward Monday.

FATHER WANTS POSSESSION OF CHILD FROM O. S. & S. O. HOME

Charging his daughter, Iva May Smith, 13, ward at the O. S. & S. O. Home, is being unlawfully restrained of her liberty, Robert O. Smith, Dayton, O., realtor, has instituted habeas corpus proceedings in Common Pleas Court against the Home board of trustees and Col. T. E. Andrews, superintendent, in an effort to obtain the child's release.

The father claims that he is entitled to custody of his child but that the board of trustees is preventing him from procuring her.

Smith asks the court to grant a writ of habeas corpus in order that she may be discharged from the alleged unlawful restraint. Left homeless by the accidental death of her mother in a railroad accident, the girl was placed in the Home to be cared for by the Dayton chapter of the Red Cross.

This action was said to be with the knowledge of her father, who was away from home at the time, serving the government in the South during the late war.

Returning to Dayton to live less than a year ago, Smith became engaged in the real estate business and has since re-married.

When he made an effort to obtain the release of the child from the O. S. & S. O. Home last fall, the board refused and has continued to refuse to turn the child over to its father up until the present time. It is charged.

Marshall and Marshall are attorneys for Smith.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

When Back Hurts Flush Your Kidneys as You Clean Your Bowels

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, sometimes get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders. You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region begin drinking lots of water. Also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice combined with lithia, and is intended to stimulate them to activity. It also helps neutralize the acids in the urine so they no longer irritate, thus helping to relieve bladder disorders. Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which everybody should take now and then to help keep the system clean. A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in trying to correct kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

WHY SPREAD SLANDER

The question as to just why one person should bother about slandering another is suggested by the reading of "The Locomotive-God," by William Ellery Leonard. Mr. Leonard, who is a professor at the University of Wisconsin, is a thorough scholar, and his method of handling psychological problems is a scientific one. Slander, he says, has caused much unhappiness.

Slander is a regular obsession with some people. There are persons who give more thought and energy to the spreading of defamatory reports about other persons than they give to more important things, such as making a living or making a life. The psychology which lies behind such activities ought to be investigated thoroughly, and laid bare for the information of those who are interested in this remarkable human race.

Why does it give pleasure to some persons to speak ill of others? Why are some persons so constituted that they will walk a mile for a bit of scandalous gossip, and will walk forty miles or telephone forty minutes to spread the evil report?

Most of us find it most pleasant to spread agreeable reports about people. Somehow, there is a sort of vicarious righteousness within us when we tell about the righteousness of somebody whom we know. We feel as though we were entitled to some of the credit for his well-doing. Foolish feeling, but pleasant. How then must the slanderer feel when he is slandering? Doesn't he feel like a partaker in the evil he ascribes to someone else?

Professor Leonard, as a psychologist, should make a study of the subject to learn just what makes people want to indulge in slander.

PLAYING POLITICS

An editorial in an Eastern magazine commenting on Congress's inexplicable lack of action in providing flood-control for the Mississippi, even after strong recommendations by President Coolidge and Secretary Hoover, states: "Congress meantime, as Will Rogers says, has bills for this and bills for that, is running hither and yon to investigate here and investigate there, relieve the farmers, force the federal reserve banks to curtail loans to brokers, investigate the operation of prohibition, promote the Boulder Dam and Muscle Shoals socialistic program and find out what ought to be the standard length of women's skirts and a few other essential things, but it has no time to devote to this paramount issue, which involves the safety of human life and property in this great central valley of the United States."

While this is not true of many individual legislators who are intelligent and conscientious, it is only too often true of our lawmaking bodies in general. One band-wagon politician with an ax to grind can discount the efforts of a dozen real representatives of the people who are unwilling to stoop to shoddy practices obviously foreign to the real purposes of government. As a result, we see time and money spent prodigally on absurd and destructive propositions and petty details, while questions of the first importance are shelved, or inadequately handled.

The Way of the World

By GROVE PATTERSON

DISTORTION

Because her bridge partner played the wrong card twice a Michigan woman committed murder and got life imprisonment. That's only an extreme example of a pretty common tendency—the tendency for many of us to take our recreation with deadly seriousness. Have you not often heard one man say of another: "He's a fine fellow, but I hate to play poker with him, or I don't like to play golf with him, or he's the nastiest fellow at tennis I ever saw."

A man who can not take his games as games should be taken is not "right." He has a very definite weakness. He may appear to be O. K. in other respects—but if you will look closely enough you will find he isn't.

A man who takes his games too seriously is a child, no matter if he is past 70.

SENSE AND SENTIMENT

A baby was born recently in Indiana without arms or legs. What we call "moral sentiment" will keep this unfortunate child alive until it dies a natural death. Nothing could be more cruel than to introduce a child thus handicapped into the struggles of this world. And yet society will do it because we have not reached the stage wherein thinking rules instead of sentiment. Some day we will have attained the courage and the sense to treat such cases as fully civilized human beings would treat them.

THE LUNCHEON KING

In Washington you can meet George Pitt, record Rotarian. In 15 years Pitt has missed but four luncheon. He has eaten 2,000 chicken croquettes which have cost him about $1,200, not counting his hat check money. He has used up 3,000 business hours.

In the eyes of many luncheon club experts here is a perfect Rotarian, a perfect Exchangeite or a perfect Kiwanian. They do not ask what this man has really done with his 2,000 chicken croquettes and his 3,000 perfectly good business hours.

The fact is that attendance at luncheons is much overemphasized in luncheon clubs. That's why the accent is too often on the luncheon. Kiwanis is a spirit. So is Exchange. So is Rotary. It is an ideal toward which men can work singly and co-operatively. Missing but four luncheon in 15 years may mean much or it may mean nothing.

The Daybook

OF A

New Yorker

—By—
BURTON RASCOE

NEW YORK, Mar. 12. — Not content with advising the well dressed man to wear pink shirts, spats, a white waistcoat, a malacca cane, a green suit and an air of what-you-may-call-it, the theatre programs are turning to even more ambitious efforts at public welfare. If you are one of those folk who are afraid to read the Graphic at a first night intermission, just turn to page four of your program and wrap yourself about a snappy short story. Or perhaps it is a short short story.

My only hope is that this meretricious idea be confined to the short story. I should be very chagrined, for example, to begin a yarn at a performance of "Burlesque," and find at the end of the page, some such note as: "Continued in the 'Manhattan Mary' program."

And what of the Chinese restaurant on Broadway? Yes, what of it? Times Square publications are even now ruminating darkly on the situation. For the Oriental restaurateur, who can, but does not, live on a bowl of rice per day easily underbids his Caucasian competitors by a wide margin. Chinese joints are not only prosperous, but they are increasing rapidly, even as their white brethren are complaining that business is terrible and that the country is going to the dogs et cetera.

So be it, and may the sucker rejoice. If he be an exceptionally sympathetic soul, he may mourn the passing of the 100 per cent American five dollar cover charge, the eight dollar sandwich and the fifteen dollar bottle of disguised rheumatism rub. But he will be a really exceptional sucker. For the rest of moderate salaried citizenry, I suspect that the heathen cabaret will be more the white collar hope than the yellow peril.

The tragedy which occurred recently when three tenements crashed into the Eighth avenue subway excavation has been due for a long time. Among my acquaintances, I number a hard-boiled fellow who works as a section boss in the big ditch. He took me down into the hole one night. He pointed out the fact that the side of the excavation is only sand rock, which crumbles almost at the touch. The often repeated story that New York is founded on solid rock is quite true, but it neglects to mention that the rock is often several hundred feet beneath the surface. All that supports side walls in the Eighth avenue trench is a series of wooden beams, placed at intervals. Subway workers, so my friend told me, are in daily fear for their lives. Every so often the sand rock begins to crumble and the workers dash for safety, while emergency engineers throw up additional beams. In this recent collapse the beams were relied on once too often, it seems. But then what are the lives of a few ditch diggers compared to the cost necessary to insure proper safety?

"Strange Interlude," Eugene O'Neill's new play which starts at about five in the afternoon and ends at eleven excited great comment. In proportion, "Strange Interlude" should be as nothing, compared to a new movie called "The Wedding March," which was directed by Eric Von Stroheim. Originally, I believe it ran to some forty reels. By dint of great persuasion, Von Stroheim cut it to twenty. If it is put on in New York, as recent announcement had it, it would start early in the afternoon, cease showing while the audience had dinner and begin again to continue well into the night. And that seems to me a very simple method by which to convince cynics that movies can be art.

How Light Underwear Helps Business

Department store managers once viewed with grave concern certain revolutionary tendencies of the times with regard to underwear. People were wearing the same weight of underwear the year round. They bought light-weight stuff for summer and made it do all winter. Somebody had cleverly discovered that it is much less of a nuisance simply to take off a heavy overcoat on entering an overheated home than to change one's underclothes.

And so it came to pass that comparatively few persons flocked to department stores for special seasonal outfits of underwear in spring or fall. In a short time the department store men found that the change in underwear sentiment, instead of proving a curse to retail business, was indeed a great boon. It not only spread underwear sales over the entire year, but it greatly increased the total sales. For the light underwear now worn lacks the prosaic durability of red flannels of other days.

Moreover, women's undergarments are more attractive and there is more incentive for the customer to spend her money for them. There is only a scant amount of romance about a set of plain, unfilled, old-fashioned woolen underwear, but the woman who sits before her dressing table preening herself, while all fussed

How to Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

HOW TO ACHIEVE BEAUTY—WRONG AND RIGHT WAYS TO EXERCISE ENTHUSIASM

Necessary to health and beauty and a happy existence are pep, energy, endurance, and good sportsmanship. If we guard our gifts and ourselves selfishly, the rewards will be few and unsatisfying. If we enter each endeavor with the will to succeed, the energy to endure the necessities which come to prince and pauper alike, and the good sportsmanship to fight a losing battle gamely and then turn around and enter the lists again, why you may be sure that none of the joy of life will pass us by.

The quotation should be, "to them that give shall be given," because that is the way I have always found life to be. Enthusiasm keeps us young. The woman who faces life with a dreary boredom, or even a half measure of interest, will not find her achievements with even the grudging effort she made to secure them. If we could only remember to keep our minds young—alert, always to the new and advanced development of our times, eager to accept the happiness that comes our way, our steps would be youthful and buoyant even when they turned on the "westward trail." Every day would bring at least one new pleasure, one new achievement, and all the fullness of life would be ours.

Then why don't we? Why do we permit the years to age our minds? Just a habit, I believe. A bad habit that shuts our hearts to the spirit of living—the spirit of eternal youth.

Enthusiasm is the guard of youth. It is a stay to the creeping paralysis of a lazy, self-satisfied existence. All the artists, the creative geniuses of the world are eternally youthful;—perennially youthful;—Age holds no terrors for them. Each day opens a new vista—a promise of further enchantment, the joy of work to do—the will to do it well. They inherit the earth because they fling their dauntless energies into the spirit of living.

Treasure your enthusiasm. Cultivate the spirit and the will to enjoy. It is another one of those secrets of charm—a secret which defies the passing of years and preserves the youth in your heart forever.

Diet and Health

By LULU HUNT PETERS M. D.
Author of "Diet and Health" and "Diet For Children"

WORMS

It used to be believed, about a century back, that in the original dust that man was made from, there were some worm eggs; for the Lord intended intended worms to be necessary and beneficial tenants of man. It was believed that they were to live on the excess food he consumed and absorb the bad humors, but when Adam sinned the worms turned on him and became pestilential and have never ceased to curse him to this day.

How do you like that theory of worms?

Now, please! don't say it is mine! I read this in a book written in 1721, so don't forget if you repeat it, to tell where it originated, for I don't want it tacked on to my teachings.

In this same book we are told, "whatever distemper children are troubled with, worms are always to be suspected." You'd be surprised to know how many mothers are still going by that advice.

No matter what symptoms a child develops, there is only one way to know whether it has worms or not, and that is to examine the stools frequently. If it has a tapeworm, there will be segments from the worm; if it has pinworms, there will be little worms looking like little quarter or half-inch pieces of white thread; if they are round worms, you will find worms five to ten inches long, looking like angle worms, but pointed at each end. If you cannot find worms, then an examination of the stool under the microscope will disclose the eggs, probably millions of them, if the child has 'em.

How do children and adults become contaminated with worms? Well, all living things arise from eggs or seeds. Worms belong to the animal kingdom, so they come from eggs; and if you and your children have worms, you have in some way swallowed some worm eggs. I shall have to modify that last statement for tape worms. If you have a tape worm, it is because you have eaten the flesh of some animal that has eaten the eggs.

In this case, the eggs have hatched in his intestines and the embryo worms have migrated to his muscles and have become encysted there. There are three stages of development—the egg stage, the encysted stage and the adult stage. More on tape worms later.

Many mothers believe that candy causes worms. It doesn't, nor does any other food, unless it happens to be contaminated with worm eggs. Most of the eggs are probably deposited on food by infected handlers who are not careful in washing their hands.

Infected children who have not been taught the importance of washing their hands, can easily contaminate other children with whom they associate. This is one of the reasons children should be taught not to swap gum, suck on the same candies, eat off the same apple, etc. In fact, a child should be taught very early not to put its fingers, or anything else, in its mouth except its proper food.

Tomorrow, under Answers to Mothers, I shall tell you about the treatment for pin worms. For round and tape worms, fasting, heavy purgation and worm medicine are needed and you must see your physician for this.

The Misery

"What is the matter with a woman who feels so miserable all the time, she can hardly sit up? Please advise me what to take."

TODAY'S RECIPES

Corn Meal Mush with Sausage—Into a kettle of boiling water stir salt and the desired amount of sausage, being sure that it separates into fine particles; then stir in meal slowly until mush is quite thick. Cook until well done; pack hot mush into a wet mold. Unmold, slice, and saute until a firm golden brown crust is formed. Because of the sausage in the mush, almost no fat is needed for sauteing. A little sausage flavors much mush. Ground beef or a mixture of beef and pork may also be used.

Corn and Carrot Custard—One cup of corn, either fresh or canned, one-half cup finely diced cooked carrot, three tablespoons butter, one teaspoon salt, one teaspoon sugar, three eggs, or one egg and two tablespoons flour, one pint milk. Prepare all other ingredients as for ordinary custard; then add the corn and carrots. Pour into a buttered baking dish and bake in a moderate oven until firm.

Escalloped Tomatoes with Jellied Eggs—Alternate layers of Tomato pulp (as firm as possible) with very thick white sauce and buttered bread crumbs. Sprinkle bread crumbs thickly on top. Bake in oven until mixture is well heated through and bread crumbs on top are crisply brown. Make up into a buttered baking dish and bake in a moderate oven until firm.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, March 12. — "Diplomatic immunity" is a "relic of barbarism," if you'll take it from quite a few Washingtonians.

A formidable rumormongering has been started by what's known as the Kalorama Citizens' association. If the national capital weren't a czarism, run by a board of commissioners who care no more how the District of Columbia feels about their government than you can be about so many Hottentots, you can bet it would be abolished. But who can tell what the commissioners'll say about it?

The Washingtonians' complaint is—they're tired of being killed by diplomats. They think it's important — but they don't understand diplomacy.

The Kalorama district is quite a tony part of Washington, where most of the embassies and legations are situated.

Now, an ambassador or minister isn't supposed to be subject to the laws of the country he's accredited to. Neither are the members of his family or any of his subordinates or hirelings. The only laws they have to pay any attention to are the laws of the country of that particular diplomat's origin.

No matter what a foreign diplomat, or any member of his personal or official family does, it isn't good form to call him to account for it.

He could commit burglary or arson or murder, and about all this country could do would be to ask his home government to recall him.

In fact, there's one well-known case of a foreign diplomatic representative who engaged in wholesale bootlegging. He could, and they say he did, import into the country all the "diplomatic liquor" that he wanted, and, on the technical "for-foreign-soil" of his legation, he could legally sell it, too, and they say he did that also.

Ultimately the state department asked—wouldn't his foreign office kindly invite him home?—which it did, and that ended that scandal. However, it goes to show that a diplomat's a privileged character.

What stirred the Kalorama Citizens' association's ire is the awful menace of "diplomatic automobiles."

Not long ago one of the Persian legation's cars killed a man. O. K., a "diplomatic incident." A little later a victim of the son of the then Norwegian minister was brought into a hospital so badly damaged that his own father operated on him, as a surgeon, without recognizing him, until, after he was dead, he was identified by papers in his pockets.

Too bad—but "diplomatic." A son of Sir Esme Howard, the British ambassador, was recently banished to England for running over a Washingtonian—but banishment was the worst fate that befell him—"diplomatic immunity."

A man who rises to the post of minister or ambassador generally has some sense.

There isn't so much criticism of the boss diplomats. The ones who hold the secretarial positions are the ones the Washington populace holds in deadly terror—and would lynch, too, sometimes, on mighty small provocation.

STRICT PARENTS

Sometimes when letters come to me from girls who have reached the age when nature intended they should begin to be interested in mating, I wonder if some parents were over young. Don't they remember their own young days? Can they possibly think it wise to deny their children the privilege of bringing their friends home? It seems such a safeguard—to provide your children with wholesome amusement at home, where you can see them and know their friends.

"My dear Mrs. Lee: I am a girl past 19, and I am not allowed to go out alone or have any boy friends. Every place I go a member of the family accompanies me. Sometimes I make a date and have some excuse for staying out to work, and meet the fellow on the corner. I would much rather meet the boy friend at home, but I dare not. I have never done anything that my parents can't trust me, and I don't understand why they treat me this way. Sometimes I feel like leaving home, as I would be able to keep myself comfortably, as I work every day. Please tell me what to do."

"A Disgusted Girl." I think I'd be tempted to read a declaration of independence to my parents, were I in your place. Tell them just how you feel, and ask them if they would RATHER meet your friends on the corner? Tell them the story, and give you the right to marry at 18 without your parents' consent, and you think you should at least be allowed to have your friends at the house and to go out untended once in a while. Ask them to remember how they felt at your age.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: We are two girls in our teens who have met two boys of whom we are very fond. The boys acted the same way for awhile, but don't show as much love for us now. Won't you please advise us what to do?"

"H. I. and C. R." See what good grades you can get in your school work and make other boy friends, but don't take them seriously.

"Cat Eyes" went with a boy for two years and then broke with him because her mother didn't like him. Now the boys won't go with her and she wants to know how to win them. They have probably gotten used to thinking of you as your first boy friend's girl, and it will take some time to change their ideas. Don't worry about it. Have all the good times you can with the girls and boy friends will come.

"Wondering What to Do" is 17 and has two beaux. Shall she go with both or shall she quit both? She adds that she is getting good marks at school, intimating that I need not tell her to leave the boys alone and pay attention to her work. And she must have an answer. Well, dear, I'd try to keep both boys for friends, and if I could not, I'd choose the one I like best.

Peter's Adventure

By MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

THE CAT-TAILS LOSE THEIR HEADS

Peter half expected to see the bird blown off his perch. The fellow had been daring enough to argue with the wind!

To his surprise, though, the wind calmed down at once (to be sure, it still continued to blow, but not nearly as roughly as it had a moment before).

Evidently it and this feathered stranger were old friends, for the wind answered the bird very pleasantly and quite as if he was glad that he was there.

"Hello, Kingfisher, old chap, how are you? Still willing to overlook a fellow's faults and say a good word for him, I hear. It's a cure for my temper to see you. To tell the truth, nothing makes me madder than to have a bird afraid of me, although I pretended that I want him to be. That is why I like you. You never stay under cover because I am abroad in full force. Not you. Out you come and ride me as a steed."

"Of course I do, and I like nothing better. Heigho! Many are the boisterous times that you and I have had together! But, then, good days are coming. Spring may not be so full of excitement, but it will be beautiful and there will be much to do. After all, between you and me, Wind, don't you think that it is the happiest time of all the year?"

"I don't know. Let me think—yes, I do. Spring is the happiest time, all things considered. I shall never be contented, though, to be quiet all through the coming months unless I have one last good frolic."

"So goodbye, old friend. I am off to see what I can do for excitement. Whoo-oo-ooo. Oh! Ssh-sh-sh-sh! I see some cat-tails over yonder. I am going to play with them."

Off blew the wind and soon Peter saw the cat-tails gayly nodding their woolly heads and dancing merrily together quite as if they thought it lots of fun to play with the old north wind. Then he saw something that made him cry out in surprise.

"Good gracious! Not snowing again, I hope! Surely those can't be flakes of snow that I see over in the swamp!" Up to this time the bird had not paid much attention to the boy, but at Peter's last remark he made a noise that sounded suspiciously like a chuckle.

"Snowflakes, indeed! How the cat-tails would like to hear you say that! They are always playing tricks—pretending to be so solemn and sedate, and then losing their heads over nothing at all. Even a light breeze makes them fly right off the stem."

"What you see floating about is the fuzz from the cat-tails heads. Maybe this is the last time they will play together. You see they are very old for cat-tails and it is almost time for them to make way for the young stalks that will grow as themselves."

"See how white the air is with the fluff! I fear that after wind has finished playing tag with them there will no longer be any cat-tails left to tell the story. Let my old friend once get started and he is apt to be pretty rough, especially in March. He means no harm but he is strong, and as he said—it is his final fling and he intends to make the most of it."

"Snowflakes indeed! Wind is playing tag with the cat-tails. That is fluff you see explained the bird."

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

THE INSTRUMENTS OF PRAISE—Praise God with the sound of the trumpet; Praise him with the psalter and harp. Praise him with the timbrel and dance; praise him with stringed instruments and organs. Praise him upon the loud cymbals; praise him upon the high sounding cymbals.—Psalm 150:3, 4, 5.

WHY SPREAD SLANDER

The question as to just why one person should bother about slandering another is suggested by the reading of "The Locomotive-God," by William Ellery Leonard, Mr. Leonard, who is a professor at the University of Wisconsin, is a thorough scholar, and his method of handling psychological problems is a scientific one. Slander, he says, has caused much unhappiness.

Slander is a regular obsession with some people. There are persons who give more thought and energy to the spreading of defamatory reports about other persons than they give to more important things, such as making a living or making a life. The psychology which lies behind such activities ought to be investigated thoroughly, and laid bare for the information of those who are interested in this remarkable human race.

Why does it give pleasure to some persons to speak ill of others? Why are some persons so constituted that they will walk a mile for a bit of scandalous gossip, and will walk forty miles or telephone forty minutes to spread the evil report?

Most of us find it most pleasant to spread agreeable reports about people. Somehow, there is a sort of vicarious righteousness within us when we tell about the righteousness of somebody whom we know. We feel as though we were entitled to some of the credit for his well-doing. Foolish feeling, but pleasant. How then must the slanderer feel when he is slandering? Doesn't he feel like a partaker in the evil he ascribes to someone else?

Professor Leonard, as a psychologist, should make a study of the subject to learn just what makes people want to indulge in slander.

PLAYING POLITICS

An editorial in an Eastern magazine commenting on Congress's inexplicable lack of action in providing flood-control for the Mississippi, even after strong recommendations by President Coolidge and Secretary Hoover, states: "Congress meantime, as Will Rogers says, has bills for this and bills for that, is running hither and yon to investigate here and investigate there, relieve the farmers, force the federal reserve banks to curtail loans to brokers, investigate the operation of prohibition, promote the Boulder Dam and Muscle Shoals socialistic program and find out what ought to be the standard length of women's skirts and a few other essential things, but it has no time to devote to this paramount issue, which involves the safety of human life and property in this great central valley of the United States."

While this is not true of many individual legislators who are intelligent and conscientious, it is only too often true of our lawmaking bodies in general. One band-wagon politician with an ax to grind can discount the efforts of a dozen real representatives of the people who are unwilling to stoop to shoddy practices obviously foreign to the real purposes of government. As a result, we see time and money spent prodigally on absurd and destructive propositions and petty details, while questions of the first importance are shelved, or inadequately handled.

The Way of the World

By GROVE PATTERSON

DISTORTION

Because her bridge partner played the wrong card twice a Michigan woman committed murder and got life imprisonment. That's only an extreme example of a pretty common tendency—the tendency for many of us to take our recreation with deadly seriousness. Have you not often heard one man say of another: "He's a fine fellow, but I hate to play poker with him, or I don't like to play golf with him, or he's the nastiest fellow at tennis I ever saw."

A man who can not take his games as games should be taken to not "right." He has a very definite weakness. He may appear to be O. K. in other respects—but if you will look closely enough you will find he isn't.

A man who takes his games too seriously is a child, no matter if he is past 70.

SENSE AND SENTIMENT

A baby was born recently in Indiana without arms or legs. What we call "moral sentiment" will keep this unfortunate child alive until it dies a natural death. Nothing could be more cruel than to introduce a child thus handicapped into the struggles of this world. And yet society will do it because we have not reached the stage wherein thinking rules instead of sentiment. Some day we will have attained the courage and the sense to treat such cases as fully civilized human beings would treat them.

THE LUNCHEON KING

In Washington you can meet George Pitt, record Rotarian. In 15 years Pitt has missed but four luncheon. He has eaten 2,000 chicken croquettes which have cost him about $1,200, not counting his hat-check money. He has used up 3,000 business hours.

In the eyes of many luncheon club experts here he is a perfect Rotarian, a perfect Exchangeite or a perfect Kiwanian. They do not ask what this man has really done with his 2,000 chicken croquettes and his 3,000 perfectly good business hours.

The fact is that attendance at luncheons is much overemphasized in luncheon clubs. That's why the accent is too often on the luncheon. Kiwanis is a spirit. So is Exchange. So is Rotary. It is an ideal toward which men can work singly and co-operatively. Missing but four luncheon in 15 years may mean much or it may mean nothing.

The Daybook

OF A

New Yorker

—By—
BURTON RASCOE

NEW YORK, Mar. 12. — Not content with advising the well dressed man to wear pink shirts, spats, a white waistcoat, a mallow cane, a green suit and an air of what-you-may-call-it, the theatre programs are turning to even more ambitious efforts at public welfare. If you are one of those folk who are afraid to read the Graphic at a first night intermission, just turn to page four of your program and wrap yourself about a snappy short story. Or perhaps it is a short short story.

My only hope is that this meritorious idea be confined to the short story. I should be very chagrined, for example, to begin a yarn at a performance of "Burlington" and find at the end of the page, some such note as: "Continued in the 'Manhattan Mary' program."

And what of the Chinese restaurant on Broadway? Yes, what of it? Times Square publications are even now ruminating darkly on the situation. For the Oriental restaurateur, who can, but does not, live on a bowl of rice, per day easily underbids his Caucasian competitors by a wide margin. Chinese joints are not only prosperous, but they are increasing rapidly, even as their white brethren are complaining that business is terrible and that the country is going to the dogs et cetera.

So be it, and may the sucker rejoice. If he be an exceptionally sympathetic soul, he may mourn the passing of the 100 per cent American five dollar cover charge, the eight dollar sandwich and the fifteen dollar bottle of disguised rheumatism rub. But he will be a really exceptional sucker. For the rest of moderate minded citizens, I suspect that the heathen cabaret will be more the white collar hope than the yellow peril.

The tragedy which occurred recently when three tenements crashed into the Eighth avenue subway excavation has been due for a long time. Among my acquaintances, I number a hard-boiled fellow who works as a section boss in the big ditch. He took me down into the hole one night. He pointed out the fact that the side of the excavation is only sand rock, which crumbles almost at the touch. The often repeated story that New York is founded on solid rock is quite true, but it neglects to mention that the rock is often several hundred feet beneath the surface.

All that supports side walls in the Eighth avenue trench is a series of wooden beams, placed at intervals. Subway workers, so my friend told me, are in daily fear for their lives. Every time the sand rock begins to crumble and the workers dash for safety, while emergency engineers throw up additional beams. In this recent collapse the beams were relied on once too often, it seems. But then what are the lives of a few ditch diggers compared to the cost necessary to insure proper safety?

"Strange Interlude," Eugene O'Neill's new play which starts at about five in the afternoon and ends at eleven excited great comment. In proportion, "Strange Interlude" should be as nothing compared to a new movie called "The Wedding March," which was directed by Eric Von Stroheim. Originally, I believe it ran to some forty reels. By dint of great persuasion, Von Stroheim cut it to twenty. If it is put on in New York, as recent announcements had it, it would start early in the afternoon, cease showing while the audience had dinner and begin again to continue well into the night. And that seems to me a very simple method by which to convince cynics that movies can be art.

How Light Underwear Helps

Department store managers once viewed with grave concern certain revolutionary tendencies of the times with regard to underwear. People were wearing the same weight of underwear the year round. They bought light-weight stuff for summer and made it do all winter. Somebody had cleverly discovered that it is much less of a nuisance simply to take off a heavy overcoat on entering an overheated home than to change one's underclothes.

And so it came to pass that comparatively few persons flocked to department stores for special seasonal outfits of underwear in spring or fall. In a short time the department store men found that the change in underwear sentiment, instead of proving a source to retail business, was indeed a great boon. It not only spread underwear sales over the entire year, but it greatly increased the total sales. For the light underwear now worn lacks the prosaic durability of red flannels of other days.

Moreover, women's undergarments are more attractive and there is more incentive for the customer to spend her money for them. There is only a scant amount of romance about a set of plain, unfilled, old-fashioned woolen underwear, but the woman who sits before her dressing table preening herself, while all fussed

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

HOW TO ACHIEVE BEAUTY WRONG AND RIGHT WAYS TO EXERCISE ENTHUSIASM

Necessary to health and beauty and a happy existence are prop, energy, endurance, and good sportsmanship. If we guard our gifts and ourselves selfishly, the rewards will be few and unsatisfying. If we enter each endeavor with the will to succeed, the energy to endure the necessities which come to prince and pauper alike, and the good sportsmanship to fight a losing battle gamely and then turn around and enter the lists again, why may we be sure that none of the joy of life will pass us by.

The quotation should be, "to them that give shall be given" because that is the way I have always found life to be. Enthusiasm keeps us young. The woman who faces life with a dreary boredom, or even a half measure of interest, will not find her achievements with even the securing effort she makes to achieve them. If we could only remember to keep our minds young—alert, always to the new and advanced development of our times, eager to accept the happiness that comes our way, our steps would be youthful and buoyant even when they turned on the "westward trail." Every day would bring at least one new pleasure, one new achievement, and all the fullness of life would be ours.

Then why don't we? Why do we permit the years to age our minds? Just a habit, I believe. A bad habit that shuts our hearts to the spirit of living—the spirit of eternal youth.

Enthusiasm is the guard of youth. It is a stay to the creeping paralysis of a lazy, self-satisfied existence. All the artists, the creative geniuses of the world are eternally enthusiastic—perennially youthful. Age holds no terrors for them. Each day opens a new vista—a promise of further enchantment, the joy of work to do—the will to do it well. They inherit the earth because they possess the spirit of living.

Treasure your enthusiasm. Cultivate the spirit and the will to enjoy. It is another one of those secrets of charm—a secret which decays the passing of years and preserves the youth in your heart forever.

Diet and Health

By LULU HUNT PETERS M. D.
Author of "Diet and Health" and "Diet For Children"

WORMS

It used to be believed, about a century back, that in the original dust that man was made from, there were some worm eggs; for the Lord intended intended worms to be necessary and beneficial tenants of man. It was believed that they were to live on the excess food he consumed and absorb the bad humors, but when Adam sinned the worms turned on him and became pestilential and have never ceased to curse him to this day.

How do you like that theory of worms? Now, please! don't say it is mine! I read this in a book written in 1721, so don't forget, if you repeat it, to tell where it originated, for I don't want it tacked on to my teachings.

In this same book we are told, "whatever distemper children are troubled with, worms are always to be suspected." You'd be surprised to know how many mothers are still going by that advice.

No matter what symptoms a child develops, there is only one way to know whether it has worms or not, and that is to examine the stools frequently. If it has a tapeworm, there will be segments from the worm; if it has pinworms, there will be quarter or half-inch pieces of white thread; if they are round worms, you will find worms five to ten inches long, looking like angle worms, but pointed at each end. If you cannot find worms, then an examination of the stool under the microscope will disclose the eggs, probably up in the delicate articles that she puts on today, is quite likely to feel much pleased with herself. So long as the effect is gratifying to the eye she is willing to spend twice the sum she formerly devoted to garments that merely kept her warm.

millions of them, if the child has 'em.

How do children and adults become contaminated with worms? Well, all living things arise from eggs or seeds. Worms belong to the animal kingdom, so they come from eggs; and if you and your children have worms, you have in some way swallowed some worm eggs. I shall have to modify that last statement for tape worms. If you have a tape worm, it is because you have eaten the flesh of some animal that has eaten the eggs. In this case, the eggs have hatched in his intestines and the tiny worms have migrated to his muscles and have become encysted there. There are three stages of the tape worm—the egg stage, the encysted stage and the adult stage. More on tape worms later.

Many mothers believe that candy causes worms. It doesn't, nor does any other food, unless it happens to be contaminated with worm eggs. Most of the eggs are probably deposited on food by infected handlers who just not careful in washing their hands.

Infected children who have not been taught the importance of washing their hands, can easily contaminate other children with whom they associate. This is one of the reasons children should be taught not to swap gum, suck on the same candies, cut off the same apple, etc. In fact, a child should be taught very early not to put its fingers, or anything else, in its mouth except its proper food.

Tomorrow, under Answers to Mothers, I shall tell you about the treatment for pin worms. For round and tape worms, fasting, heavy purgation and worm medicine are needed and you must see your physician for this.

TODAY'S RECIPES

Corn Meal Mush with Sausage—Into a kettle of boiling water stir salt and the desired amount of sausage, being sure that it separates into fine particles; then stir in meal slowly until mush is quite thick. Cook until well done; pack hot mush into a wet mold. Unmold, slice, and saute until a firm golden brown crust is formed. Because of the sausage in the mush, almost no fat is needed for sauteing. A little sausage flavors much mush. Ground beef or a mixture of beef and pork may also be used.

Corn and Carrot Custard—One cup of corn, either fresh or canned, one-half cup finely diced cooked carrot, three tablespoons butter, one teaspoon salt, one teaspoon sugar, three eggs, or one egg and two tablespoons flour, one pint milk. Prepare all other ingredients as for ordinary custard. I then add the corn and carrots. Pour into a buttered baking dish and bake in a moderate oven until firm.

Escalloped Tomatoes with Jellied Eggs—Alternate layers of Tomato pulp (as firm as possible) with very thick white sauce and buttered bread crumbs. Sprinkle bread crumbs thickly on top. Bake in oven until mixture is well heated through and bread crumbs on top are crisply brown. Make indentations in the bread crumbs with a tablespoon. Break an egg into each hollow and put back into oven until egg whites are opaque.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, March 12. — "Diplomatic immunity" is a "relic of barbarism," if you'll take it from quite a few Washingtonians. A formidable rumpus to abolish it has been started by what's known as the Kalorama Citizens' association. If the national capital weren't a czarism, run by a board of commissioners who care no more how the District of Columbia feels about their government than they do about so many Hotentots, you can bet it would be abolished. But who can tell what the commissioners'll say about it?

The Washingtonians' complaint is—they're tired of being killed by diplomats. They think it's important—but they don't understand diplomacy.

The Kalorama district is quite a tony part of Washington, where most of the embassies and legations are situated.

Now, an ambassador or minister isn't supposed to be subject to the laws of the country he's accredited to. Neither are the members of his family or any of his subordinates or hirelings. The only laws they have to pay any attention to are the laws of the country of that particular diplomat's origin.

No matter what a foreign diplomat, or any member of his personal or official family does, it's good form to call him to account for it.

He could commit burglary or arson or murder, and about all this country could do would be to ask his home government to recall him.

In fact, there's one well-known case of a foreign diplomat representative who engaged in wholesale bootlegging.

He could, and they say he did, import into the country all the "diplomatic liquor" that he wanted to, and, on the technically "foreign" side of his ledger, he could legally sell it, too, and they say he did that also.

Ultimately the state department asked—wouldn't his foreign office kindly invite him home?—which it did, and that ended that scandal. However, it goes to show that a diplomat's a privileged character.

What stirred the Kalorama Citizens' association's ire is the awful menace of "diplomatic automobiles."

Not long ago one of the Persian legation's cars killed a man. O. K.—a "diplomatic incident." A little later a victim of the son of the then Norwegian minister was brought into a hospital so badly damaged that his own father operated on him, as a surgeon, without recognizing him, until, after he was dead, he was identified by papers in his pockets.

Too bad—but "diplomatic." A son of Sir Esme Howard, the British ambassador, was recently banished to England for running over a Washingtonian—but banishment was the worst fate that befel him—"diplomatic immunity."

A man who rises to the post of minister or ambassador generally has some sense.

There isn't so much criticism of the boss diplomats. The young squirts who hold the secretarial positions are the ones the Washington populace holds in deadly terror—and would lynch, too, sometimes, on mighty small provocation.

STRICT PARENTS

Sometimes when letters come to me from girls who have reached the age when nature intended they should begin to be interested in mating, I wonder if some parents were ever young. Don't they remember their own young days? Can they possibly think it wise to deny their children the privilege of bringing their friends home? It seems such a safeguard—to provide your children with wholesome amusement at home, where you can see them and know their friends.

"My dear Mrs. Lee: I am a girl past 19, and I am not allowed to go out alone or have any boy friends. Every place I go a member of the family accompanies me. Sometimes I make a date and have some excuse for staying out to work, and meet the fellow on the corner. I would much rather meet the boy friend at home, but I dare not. I have never done anything so that my parents can't trust me, and I don't understand why they treat me this way. Sometimes I feel like leaving home, as I would be able to keep myself comfortably, as I work every day. Please tell me what to do."

"I think I'd better not read a declaration of independence to my parents, were I in your place. Tell them just how you feel, and ask them if they would RATHER you met your friends on the corner? Tell them that your state gives you the right to marry at 18 without your parents' consent, and you think you should at least be allowed to have your friends at the house and to go out unattended once in a while. Ask them to remember how they felt at your age."

"Dear Mrs. Lee: We are two girls in our teens who have met two boys of whom we are very fond. The boys acted the same way for awhile, but don't show as much love for us now. Won't you please advise us what to do?"

"H. I. and C. B." See what good grades you can get in your school work and make other boy friends, but don't take them seriously.

"Cat Eyes" went with a boy for two years and then broke with him because her mother didn't like him. Now the boys won't go with her and she wants to know how to win them. They have probably gotten used to thinking of you as your first boy friend's girl, and it will take some time to change their ideas. Don't worry about it. Have all the good times you can with the girls and boy friends will come.

"Wondering What to Do" is 17 and has two beaux. Shall she go with both or shall she quit both? She adds that she is cutting good marks at school, intimating that I need not tell her to leave the boys alone and pay attention to her work. And she must have an answer soon. Well, dear, I'd try to keep both boys for friends, and if I could not, I'd choose the one I like best.

Peter's Adventure

By MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

THE CAT-TAILS LOSE THEIR HEADS

Peter half expected to see the bird blown off his perch. The fellow had been daring enough to argue with the wind!

To his surprise, though, the wind calmed down at once (to be sure, it still continued to blow, but not nearly so roughly as it had a moment before).

Evidently it and this feathered stranger were old friends, for the wind answered the bird very pleasantly and quite as if he was glad that he was there.

"Hello, kindhearted old chap, how are you? Still willing to overlook a fellow's faults and say a good word for him, I hear. It's a cure for my temper to see you. To tell the truth, nothing makes me madder than to have a bird afraid of me, although I pretended that I want him to be. That is why I like you. You never stay under cover because I am abroad in full force. Not you. Out you come and ride me as a steed."

"Of course I do, and I like nothing better. Heigho! Many are the boisterous times that you and I have had together! But, then, good days are coming. Spring may not be so full of excitement, but it will be beautiful, and there will be much to do. After all, between you and me, Wind, don't you think that it is the happiest time of all the year?"

"I don't know. Let me think—yes, I do. Spring is the happiest time, all things considered. I shall never be contented, though, to be quiet all through the coming months unless I have one last good frolic."

"So, goodby, old friend. I am off to see what I can do for excitement. Who-oo-ooo-oh! Ssh-sh-sh-sh! I see some cat-tails over yonder. I am going to play with them."

Off blow the wind and soon Peter saw the cat-tails easily nodding their woolly heads and dancing merrily together quite as if they thought it lots of fun to play with the old north wind. Then he saw something that made him cry out in surprise.

"Good gracious! Not snowing again, I hope! Surely those can't be flakes of snow that I see over in the swamp!" Up to this time the bird had not paid much attention to the boy, but at Peter's last remark he made a noise that sounded suspiciously like a chuckle.

"Snowflakes, indeed! How the cat-tails would like to hear you say that! They are always playing tricks—pretending to be so solemn and sedate, and then losing their heads over nothing at all. Even a light breeze makes them fly right off the stem."

"What you see floating about is the fuzz from the cat-tails heads. Maybe this is the last time they will play together. You see they are very old for cat-tails and it is almost time for them to make way for the young stalks that will grow up straight and strong and as jolly as themselves."

"See how white the air is with the fluff! I fear that after wind has finished playing tag with them they will no longer be any cat-tails left to tell the story. Let my old friend once get started and he is apt to be pretty rough, especially in March. He means no harm but he is strong and as he said—it is his final fling and he intends to make the most of it."

Next—"Every Inch a King."

"SNOWFLAKES INDEED! WIND IS PLAYING TAG WITH THE CAT-TAILS. THAT IS FLUFF YOU SEE! EXPLAINED THE BIRD."

"SNOWFLAKES INDEED! WIND IS PLAYING TAG WITH THE CAT-TAILS. THAT IS FLUFF YOU SEE! EXPLAINED THE BIRD."

Stivers Eliminates Central From Tournament

SECOND-HALF RALLY FAILS AND XENIA LOSES CONTEST 32 TO 25

Giant Dayton Center Makes Things Tough For Blue And White Until Suppressed On Personal Fouls —Size Gives Team Big Edge

By PHIL FRAME

HATEVYR chances Greene County had of winning laurels in the Southwestern Ohio regional basketball tournament at Dayton, vanished when Xenia Central High School was eliminated by Stivers High, advance favorite, 32 to 25 in the semi-finals Saturday afternoon, but only after one of the most courageous uphill battles ever fought by a Blue and White quintet.

Far behind at the half-way mark, Xenia found itself in the second half and gave a great comeback exhibition that came near to altering tournament history.

It is Xenia gained some satisfaction in the knowledge that it undoubtedly possessed the second best team entered in the Class A division of the tournament.

Defeat was no disgrace to the Blue and White team. When any basketball team can go into a contest against a center that towers into the empyrean like a mountain and takes the tip-off all the time; when by luck or merit—call it what you will—this same team secures the rebound from the backboard and most of the time on both offense and defense; when these advantages add uncanny shooting ability from long range, that team is simply unbeatable. No wonder Central High Stivers had the edge in height, weight and speed.

Fans who swarmed into the coliseum in large numbers to see this particular contest were well repaid for doing so, as Xenia made a gallant but unavailing fight that kept the spectators in a turmoil.

Stivers started off with a rush, guarding closely and leading 12 to 4 at the end of the first quarter. During which Kolb's team obtained not a single field goal, Xenia was puzzled by the Stivers man-form defense and obtained very few shots at the basket, and these from long range.

Instead of relinquishing its advantage, Stivers continued to pile up point after point and when the first half closed, indications pointed to an easy victory for the Dayton team. The score was 25 to 9, an apparently comfortable margin.

Xenia came out in the second half to play so brilliantly for a time that it appeared as though victory might yet perch on its banner. Passing skillfully and shooting accurately, Central changed the complexion of the game from what appeared to be a rout to a closely-contested affair. Fans began to sit up and take notice.

From 26 to 9, Xenia brought the score to 27 to 21 at the end of the third period, outscoring Stivers 12 to 1 in this quarter. Stivers also lost Captain Bob Lively and Hosket, giant center, on personal fouls in this period. Xenia was going stronger every minute.

With the gap being rapidly closed, Stivers changed its tactics in the last period and played purely a defensive game, even outscoring Xenia by one point in the final session. Stivers began to stall for time, passing the ball from hand to hand and seldom shooting. It was treacherous tactics that saved the game.

Too much praise can not be heaped upon Farrier, the six-foot-two Stivers guard in this quarter. He gave an almost collegiate exhibition of handling the ball and was in perfect control of the situation at all times, directing and encouraging his mates when guidance was needed. His performance in keeping hold of the ball will long be remembered.

Efforts of the Xenia quintet availed it nothing despite determined onslaughts and long shooting in the ebbing moments of the game.

EARLEY GUARD ON ALL-BUCKEYE FIVE

Eldon Earley, former Jamestown High School star athlete and sensational running guard on the University of Cincinnati basketball team, newly-crowned champions of the Buckeye Association, during the past season, has been selected at guard on the mythical all-association first team by Frank Lane, Cincinnati referee, who officiated many of the contests.

Earley was placed at guard on the all-star second team by coaches of the six schools in the association, who picked official teams.

Earley was the mainstay of the Bearcats on the defense and was also capable of scoring frequently. Handicapped by an injury, he was not much of a help to his team early in the season.

Bowling

Fords gained a full game on the league-leading Greene County Lumber Co. team as a result of last week's play in the Recreation Bowling League. The leaders are now out in front by only three full games.

In the City League, the Downtown Country Club maintained its eight and one-half game advantage over the Red Wing Co., as both teams won two games.

Schedule this week: Monday — Ford vs. Los Ramos Cigars at 8:30; Buicks vs. Lang Transfers at 8:30; Tuesday — Greene County Lumber Co. vs. Studebaker Commanders at 7:30; Thursday — Red Wings vs. Brown Furniture Co. at 8:30; Downtown Country Club vs. Chrysler Motors at 8:30.

LEAKAS FURRIERS DISLODGE XENIANS IN MAPLE TOURNEY

Blue Bird Pies Out Of Picture—Bolling Rolls High

THE Leakas Furrier team of Dayton took second place in the five man division of the bowling tournament being sponsored by Xenia merchants with a score of 2,796 Saturday.

The visitors rolled games of 504, 920 and 972, DeWeese leading the assault on the maples with a series of 672.

The Blue Bird Pies, another Dayton quintet, rolled 2,538, failing to place in the standing of the five leaders.

Dayton bowlers also failed to dislodge the five present leaders in the doubles, although producing one change in the standing in the singles and one in all-events.

Bolling, member of the Leakas Furrier team did not belie his name, rolling 635 in the singles, which gave him second place among the individuals.

DeWeese, of the same team, assumed third place in the all-events standing with a total of 1,815 for his nine games. He rolled 672 in the five-man match, 560 in the doubles and 583 in the singles.

JUBILEE SINGERS HEARD AT SCHOOL

Presentation of a delightful musical program by the Famous Jubilee Singers, from Tuskegee Institute, Tuskegee, Ala., a noted colored singing group, featured chapel exercises at Shorter Hall, Wilberforce University Saturday morning.

The group is returning South after a successful Eastern tour during which the singers broadcast from radio station KDKA, Pittsburgh, Pa. The Saturday program included negro spirituals.

Big Blue Had Melodramatic Record

"From Rags to Riches" or "A Bad Beginning Makes a Good Ending" may sound like the title of an old-fashioned "melodrama," never-theless it suits the 1927-28 basketball season of Xenia Central High School to a "T."

The Blue and White quintet started off its schedule in anything but an impressive manner, losing its first four games before the Christmas holidays.

Such a start would ordinarily be sufficient to discourage most any team, but not Xenia.

Resuming the schedule after the holiday vacation, Central won its first game in vociferous fashion at the expense of Greenville, the "weak sister" of the Miami Valley League, by a score of 53 to 18.

This apparently revived the players for Xenia proceeded to extend its winning streak to six consecutive games before losing to Eaton on an off night.

Undaunted by the ending of the winning streak, Coach Kolb's basketball team had no time in launching another string of victories, this time winning seven straight games before being out-pointed by Stivers High School of Dayton in the semi-finals of the Class A division of the Southwestern Ohio regional basketball tournament at Dayton last Saturday.

The record for the season is thirteen games won and six lost. Possibly Xenia was tagged by the League, by a score of 53 to 18.

hinx number of thirteen victories, hence the defeat by Stivers which meant elimination in the tournament.

Four regulars on the team played their last game for Xenia. They are Captain Bill Clemans, center; Doak and Morton, forwards; and Higgins, guard. All are seniors.

Their places will be difficult to fill next season, although Xenia will have promising material in Gibney, Smittle, Buell, Bell and Scurry.

Next year's team will be built around John Ribney, regular guard for the last two years.

The season just closed was noteworthy for the wonderful defense exhibited by Xenia in all of its games. No team scored more than thirty-two points off Central, a mark which was reached by Stivers in the tourney. Many games were won by huge scores and a new record for high-scoring was set when Central won by sixty-six points against Troy in the tournament.

Incidentally this season's combination won the first championship to be awarded in the Miami Valley League, without the loss of a game in five league contests played.

Every league game was won by such decisive margins as to leave no room for doubt as to Xenia's superiority.

Following is the record for the season, one of the most successful in the history of the school:

Xenia, 17; Leeward, 31.

Xenia, 10; Columbus Central, 11.

Xenia, 20; Wilmington, 25.

Xenia, 17; Springfield, 22.

Xenia, 53; Greenville, 18.

Xenia, 40; U. of D. prep, 16.

Xenia, 40; Troy, 17.

Xenia, 40; Bath Twp., 12.

Xenia, 29; Miamisburg, 21.

Xenia, 28; Middletown, 24.

Xenia, 19; Eaton, 29.

Xenia, 24; Delaware, 19.

Xenia, 29; St. Rose (Lima) 22.

Xenia, 27; Withrow (Cin.) 11.

Xenia, 34; Piqua, 21.

Xenia, 31; Sidney, 23.

Xenia, 66; Troy, 22.

Xenia, 36; Miamisburg, 21.

Xenia, 25; Stivers (Dayton) 32.

Lowly Sox Still That Way

Walsh Finds Little To Write Home About After Visiting Boston American Camp—Infield Appears Faulty.

(Editor's Note: This is the fourth of a series of articles by Davis J. Walsh, dealing with developments in various major league training camps. Other articles of the series will follow.)

By DAVIS J. WALSH
I. N. S. Sports Editor

BRADENTON, Fla., March 12.—Say "yes" and the first thing you know you are a come-on; say "no" and, pronto, you are a big banker, doing big things in a big way or something. Say both with reasonable intelligence and maybe you belong in the White House.

And then again, life being the complex pastime it is, you may be the manager of the Boston Red Sox.

The writer interviewed Bill Carrigan today, with the following result:

Q.—What do you think of your Red Sox?
A.—Yes.

Q.—How would you rate the American League teams on what they have shown to date?
A.—No.

This really was all I wished to know, so I thanked the gentleman kindly and rushed across to the wire with the story. These garrulous Irish—how they do talk on.

However, and that, I wish to say that I found the interview both illuminating and instructive. It reminded me of the fact that the Bill Carrigan, manager, was William F. Carrigan, banker, in those off years when great Red Sox had ceased to be. His days then were "yes" and "no" days and maybe this form of intercourse has become habitual.

More probably, however, it is due to the fact that Bill Carrigan is more than passing shrewd and in consequence, he realizes that he has little to talk about, anyway. He is the manager of an eighth place ball club.

Twelve years ago the Red Sox were world's champion, a great ball club with a great manager, kindly unassuming and very mild. Bill Carrigan still is just that kind of a manager but, unfortunately, the Red Sox are no longer that kind of a club.

But ball players will tell you that no team long can remain horizontal with Carrigan at its head. The Sox failed to get out of last place in 1927, the first year of his comeback; they figure they will do it this season.

At that, they practically are the same club, so there is nothing definite on which to base such a hope and the impression I gained from Carrigan is that he is wasting neither time nor thought with idle fancies of that sort.

"We are learning to play ball," was his dry comment. "With some players it takes time. I can't say how long it will take with mine."

At this juncture there was evidence that a spontaneous expression of some kind was struggling for utterance against his better judgment.

"I will say this," he finally declared, and I judged that better judgment had lost, "this kid, Joe Cicero, looks like a come-on."

Inquiry developed the fact that the young man is named Joseph Doughty Cicero, that he hails from Atlantic City, played with Easton, Penna., last year and that he really is a young man, indeed. He is only sixteen years old but either is ready at this moment or is getting ready with great haste. He is a third baseman and in addition to looking the part of a very natty pattern at the position, he has been hitting them out of all reason, to say nothing of several ball parks.

Cicero, I gather, is exhibit A, on this ball club. Exhibit B are the pitchers. Offhand, it would appear that exhibit C is gone for the day.

Byron Harrison, human telegraph from Bangs, Texas, Don MacFadden, Somerville, Mass., Charley Ruffing, Nokomis, Ill., Jack Russell, Paris, Texas, and Harold Witte, Clay City, Ill., were a better than average pitching staff last year. They still are, but just by way of emphasis and for good measure, they may be joined by Herb Bradley and Cliff Garrison, right handers from Agenda, Kansas, and Tempe, Arizona, respectively. Both look particularly well down here. So does Ed Morris, who pitched some fifty-seven games in two years at Mobile.

Still another good one is Merle Settlemyre, of Lakeview, Ohio, who also is up from Mobile. Merle is a left hander, John Wilson, of Thomaston, Georgia, up from Waterbury and Bob Cremins, left hander, with an club last year, have better than an outside chance of sticking. Of course, some of these worthies must go but nobody around here seems to know just whom how and when.

Yes, the Red Sox are ahead of the game on pitching. But otherwise they are pretty much the same outfit that finished a bad last in 1927. The old infield of Phil Todd at first base; Bill Regan, at second; Jack Rothrock, at shortstop; and Bill Rogell, at third, is due to operate again. Maybe the operation will be one of those "successful" ones in which the patient inconspicuously dies for these lads are no better than fair. Buddy Myer, Ellisville, Miss., and Russell Rollins, 1927 utility men, will be 1928 utility men, too.

Cicero, of course, is a distinct possibility, although he still is a year away. Paul Hinson, up from Joplin, isn't likely to tarry long, however.

Freddie Hoffman, St. Louis, and Johnny Hevins, Covington, Ky., have returned as first string catchers, which means that the Sox are fairly well protected in that sector. Charley Berry, former Lafayette star and, looks like the third man, although he is getting something of a rally from Ed Connelly, Brooklyn semi-pro, Ed Doherty, Holy Cross man, is running lusty in this race, if any.

Ken Williams, the reformed St. Louisan; Danny Williams, back again from Mobile, and Ira Flaggstead, 1927 survivor, will compose the regular outfield. This combination, too, is merely fair enough, providing you are not feeling too tactful. George Loopp, and Doug Taitt, also are around but nothing in particular is being done about it. In fact Arlie Tarbert, Columbus, Ohio, specimen, looks like the extra outfielder. He came up last year and contrived to stick.

THREE BOUND OVER FOR GRAND LARCENY

Three colored men, surprised by police while engaged in an attempt to steal gasoline from a filling station at E. Main St., and Jasper Ave., early Saturday morning, were bound over to the grand jury on grand larceny charges by Mayor John W. Prugh Saturday.

Each pleaded guilty. They were committed to the County Jail in default of bonds of $1,000 each.

The trio registered as Elwood Gordon, 21, 1115 Mound St., Springfield, O.; Remus Jackson, 21, 562 Durbin Ave., Dayton, and George Carter, 21, 317 S. Raymond St., Dayton. Jackson and Carter said they formerly lived in Chicago, Ill.

Following their arrest, police discovered that the auto in their possession was owned by Arthur Neatherton, 614 N. Galloway St., and had been stolen shortly before.

"Well, I'm Here!"

So says the Babe as he surveys the spring training activities at St. Petersburg, Fla. Mr. G. Herman Ruth certainly looks fit, doesn't he, though? And that smile seems to assure many a smiling four-base knock forthcoming this season.

CEDARVILLE PLAYS FAMOUS AUTOS IN XENIA

Yellow Jackets Will Make Post-Season Appearance Here

Cedarville College "Yellow Jackets," having concluded one of the school's most successful basketball seasons of recent years, will appear at Central High School gymnasium for a post-season game with the Famous Auto Five, crack Xenia independent team, Wednesday night, March 14.

The Xenia quintet has been going at a speedy clip this season and entertains high hopes of providing an interesting evening for Coach Marvin Borst's strong quintet.

Cedarville appeared in Xenia for a game once before this season easily defeating The Downtown Country Club team 30 to 20. The second appearance of the team is expected to draw a large crowd since the Famous Auto Five, one of the strongest independent teams developed in Xenia in several years, has a full following in this city.

Such stars as Nagley, Adair, Allen and Fisher, forwards; Smith, center; Gordon and R. Jacobs, guards, will appear in the lineup of the "Yellow Jackets."

Xenia's team is composed of Le-South and Gagner at forwards; Smith at center; and Bowwell, Leopold, Yeakley and Vannorsdall, guards. A close game is anticipated.

Wednesday night's contest, starting at about 8 o'clock, will be preceded by a good preliminary at 7 o'clock.

XENIANS DEFEATED IN BOWLING MATCHES

Xenia bowlers did not fare so well in two six-game doubles matches which picked Springfield players on the Recreation alleys at Springfield Sunday afternoon and evening.

Springfield minerlite artists won the matches by scores of 2,384 to 2,036 and 2,349 to 2,318.

The Springfield team of Schenk and Marshall defeated Moore and L. Regan, of Xenia, in the afternoon two-man match. Marshall rolled 1,290 for his six games.

In the event match, L. Regan and Hedge, Xenia, were noosed out by Vance and Marshall of Springfield, by only twenty-one pins. Regan rolled 1,158; Hedge, 1,160; Vance 1,196, and Marshall, 1,153.

COACHES NAME DOAK, CLEMANS ON ALL-STAR LEAGUE QUINTET

Xenia Central, Loop Champions, Draws Two Places On Mythical Five—Morton and Gibney Picked On Second Team

MIAMI VALLEY ALL-STAR TEAMS

These teams were selected for the first and second all-star basketball teams of the Miami Valley League by the coaches of the six schools, which are members of the league:

FIRST TEAM	Pos.	SECOND TEAM
Babbitt (Piqua)	F.	Collins (Sidney)
Doak (Xenia)	C.	Morton (Xenia)
Clemans (Xenia)	F.	Heiland (Miamisburg)
Libbee (Miamisburg)	G.	Gibney (Xenia)
Counts (Troy)	G.	Taylor (Sidney)
		Hilbert (Piqua)

Xenia Central High School's basketball quintet, champions of the Miami Valley League for 1927-28, carried off the bulk of honors in the all-star first and second team selections made by the coaches of the six league teams.

Two of the stars of the Xenia attack, Doak, colored forward, and Captain Clemans, center, each gained places on the first team, which is rounded out by the selection of Babbitt, Piqua, forward; Captain Libbee, Miamisburg, and Counts, Troy, at guards.

Two of the remaining cogs in the Blue and White court machine won second-team positions, Morton gaining one forward position and his teammate, Gibney, a place at one of the guards.

Collins, Sidney, is placed at the other forward berth; Heiland, Miamisburg, at center, while Hilbert, Piqua, and Taylor, Sidney, tied for the remaining guard position.

Xenia Central won the league championship for the first time with five straight victories.

The six coaches who selected the all-league teams are: Vic Kolb, of Xenia Central; G. P. Wertz, Piqua; Granville Robinson, Sidney; W. A. Howard, Troy; David Evans, Miamisburg and Tom Ness, Greenville.

Greenville, tail-end in the league, is the only team failing to obtain a place on either the first or second team.

Counts, of Troy, was given nine votes, but four were for center and five for guard. Of the remaining guard positions, Gibney, brilliant Xenia running guard, received four votes. Taylor of Sidney and Hilbert Piqua captain, each got three votes and so both are named on the second team.

Heiland, lanky Miamisburg center, gets the pivot position on the second team, although also receiving several votes for guard. Morton easily obtained a berth at forward

HATEVER chances Greene County had of winning laurels in the Southwestern Ohio regional basketball tournament at Dayton, vanished when Xenia Central High School was eliminated by Stivers High, advance favorite, 32 to 25 in the semi-finals Saturday afternoon, but only after one of the most courageous uphill battles ever fought by a Blue and White quintet.

Far behind at the half-way mark, Xenia found itself in the second half and gave a great comeback exhibition that came near to altering tournament history.

As it is Xenia gained some satisfaction in the knowledge that it undoubtedly possessed the second best team entered in the Class A division of the tournament.

Defeat was no disgrace to the Blue and White team. When any basketball team can go into a contest against a center that towers into the empyrean like a mountain and takes the tip-off all the time; when by luck or merit—call it what you will—this same team secures the rebound from the backboard and most of the time on both offense and defense, when to these advantages add uncanny shooting ability from long range—well, that team is simply unbeatable. No wonder Central lost. Stivers had the edge in height, weight and speed.

Fans who swarmed into the coliseum in large numbers to see this particular contest were well repaid for doing so, as Xenia made a gallant but unavailing fight that kept the spectators in a turmoil.

Stivers started off with a rush, guarding closely and leading 12 to 4 at the end of the first quarter during which Kolb's team obtained not a single field goal. Xenia was puzzled by the Stivers man-for-man defense and obtained very few shots at the basket, and these from long range.

Instead of relinquishing its advantage, Stivers continued to pile up point after point and when the first half closed, indications pointed to an easy victory for the Dayton school. The score was 26 to 9, an apparently comfortable margin.

Xenia came out in the second half to play so brilliantly for a time that it appeared as though victory might yet be within its grasp. Passing skillfully and shooting accurately, Central changed the complexion of the game from what appeared to be a rout to a closely-contested affair. Fans began to sit up and take notice.

From 26 to 9, Xenia brought the score to 27 to 21 at the end of the third period, outscoring Stivers 12 to 9 in this quarter. Stivers also lost Captain Bob Lively and Hosket, giant center, on personal fouls in this period. Xenia was going stronger every minute.

With the gap being rapidly closed Stivers changed its tactics in the last period and played purely a defensive game, even outscoring Xenia by one point in the final session. Stivers began to stall for time, passing the ball from hand to hand and seldom shooting. It was freezing tactics that saved the game.

Too much praise can not be heaped upon Farley, the six-foot-two stivers guard in this quarter. He gave an almost collegiate exhibition of handling the ball and was in perfect control of the situation at all times, directing and encouraging his mates when guidance was needed. His performance in keeping hold of the ball will long be remembered.

Frantic efforts of the Xenia quintet availed it nothing despite determined onslaughts and long shooting in the ebbing moments of

EARLEY GUARD ON ALL-BUCKEYE FIVE

Eldon Earley, former Jamestown High School star athlete and sensational running guard on the University of Cincinnati basketball team, newly-crowned champion of the Buckeye Association, during the past season, had been selected at guard on the mythical all-association first team by Frank Lane, Cincinnati referee, who officiated many of the contests.

Earley was placed at guard on the all-star second team by coaches of the six schools in the association, who picked official teams.

Earley was the mainstay of the Bearcats on the defense and was also capable of scoring frequently. Handicapped by an injury, he was not much of a help to his team early in the season.

Bowling

Fords gained a full game on the league-leading Greene County Lumber Co. team as a result of last week's play in the Recreation Bowling League. The leaders are now even in front by only three full games.

In the City League, the Downtown Country Club maintained its eight and one-half game advantage over the Red Wing Co., as both teams won two games.

Schedule this week: Monday — Fords vs. Los Ramos; Cigars at 6:30; Buicks vs. Lang Transfers at 8:30; Tuesday — Greene County Lumber Co. vs. Studebaker Commanders at 7:30; Thursday — Red Wings vs. Brown Furniture Co. at 6:30; Downtown Country Club vs. Chrysler Motors at 8:30.

LEAKAS FURRIERS DISLodge XENIANS IN MAPLE TOURNEY

Blue Bird Pies Out Of Picture—Bolling Rolls High

THE Leakas Furrier bowling team of Dayton took second place in the five-man division of the bowling tournament sponsored by Xenia merchants with a score of 2,796 Saturday.

The visitors rolled games of 504, 920 and 972, DeWeese leading the assault on the maples with a series of 672.

The Blue Bird Pies, another Dayton quintet, rolled 2,538, failing to place in the standing of the five leaders.

Dayton bowlers also failed to dislodge the five present leaders in the doubles, although producing one change in the standing in the singles and one in all-events.

Bolling, member of the Leakas Furrier team did not belie his name, rolling 685 in the singles, which gave him second place among the individuals.

DeWeese, of the same team, assumed third place in the all-events standing with a total of 1,815 for his nine games. He rolled 872 in the five-man match, 560 in the doubles and 583 in the singles.

CALIFORNIA STILL MAN'S COUNTRY BUT NOT ENOUGH OF 'EM

SACRAMENTO, Cal., March 12.—Founded by rugged "he-men", bent on search for precious metal and adventure, California still remains overwhelmingly "a man's country."

For the girl of "matrimonial intent", however, California offers great inducements. In this outpost of the West, be it known, a maid can still be "choosy" in the business of selecting her man. The market is glutted with 'em. But for the man seeking a mate, the outlook is not so good. California girls are at a premium and even Hollywood has failed to balance up supply and demand for the state as a whole.

Men in Majority
In the "marriageable group," according to a population analysis just completed by L. E. Ross, state statistician, there are nearly 250,000 more eligible single men than girls.

The slogan of state boost organizations, in their hunt for new settlers, should not be "send us men" but rather "send us women," according to Ross, and yet each train continues to bring in men in great numbers and only a scattering of wives, sweethearts and daughters.

Ross' check, based on latest census returns, reports 239,156 single girls in the state of 15 years and over.

The same analysis, however, discloses 535,419 single men in the same age group.

The greatest number of single girls are in the 15 to 19 age group, with a total of 104,456. But they soon go to the altar, as the next age classification—20 to 24—finds the total reduced to 60,778.

Many Young Men
Among men, the largest single group is between 25 and 34 years, with a total of 130,779, compared with 31,467 single women of the same age.

If a man is content with a wife who has had "previous experience" in the marital experiment, however, he will find a large field to choose from.

For instance, California boasts 162,871 widows and only 67,626 widowers.

Again, there are 23,105 divorcees in the state, but only 21,568 divorced men.

But in marrying classes generally, the eligible men far out-number the girls. Ross reports, and the ratio remains fairly constant with the population increase.

PUZZLES SCIENCE BY READING IN REVERSE

Allen Morton Luther

By JOSEPH S. WARD, JR.
DIGHTON, Mass., March 12.—It doesn't pay to be too smart. Particularly in Dighton.

There are a good many reasons for not being over-clever anywhere. But in Dighton, the main reason is Morty Luther.

Morty puzzles the scientists, and confounds the slick strangers who try to have some fun with him.

His weapon is an inborn love for tackling a book upside down. Most people will object if a volume is even held at an angle while they are reading, but Allen Morty Luther is never satisfied unless his book is right spang upside down.

Then he can read with rapidity and enjoyment.

Reads in Reverse
It is not so long ago that an out-of-towner came upon Morty Luther earnestly perusing a newspaper.

Overcome with curiosity, the visitor tapped Luther on the shoulder and asked: "Are you an antipodean, or just plain crazy?"

You seem to be following the lines and turning the pages, but unless my eyes deceive me, that paper is upside down."

"Well, I may be crazy, but I'm still at large," returned Luther. "But what was that word you first called me?"

"Antipodean," answered the stranger.

"Oh, I know," said Morty. "You spell it naedopitna. Ask me another."

"Supporhtacehtip sut cere," shot back Luther. "I give up," cried the stranger, and vanished.

Luther can read and spell better in reverse than the average man can forward. It is not an acquired habit, which he has studied to pick up, but a peculiarity with which he was born.

When he went to school he had a great deal of trouble trying to convince the teachers that he was not attempting to annoy them and amuse other children by the way he held his books.

He has been examined by physiologists and psychologists, and has puzzled them all.

Several times Luther has been approached by theatrical men interested in having him take a turn on the stage, spelling words backwards as called out by the audience. But he has always preferred to live a peaceful existence, with his farm and his inverted books.

These boys, all employees of the Pennsylvania Railroad and known as the American Broadway Quartet, will entertain Kiwanis Club members at their weekly dinner at the Elk's Club Tuesday night.

The quartet is being brought here by S. W. Guyton, Pennsylvania master carpenter here. The quartet is made up from employees in the Chicago district of the railroad.

Frank E. Strouse, special representative of the general manager, is in charge of the tour. In the picture above: Top, A. C. Bauer, first tenor (left) and George I. Laing, baritone; center, Art Johler, accompanist; bottom, G. K. Stier, second tenor (left) and R. L. Everett, bass.

JACK and JILL

A MODERN STORY OF LOVE AND ROMANCE
By CLIFFORD WEBB, AUTHOR OF "BROKEN THREADS" "TWIN LOVES" "THE SOB SISTER" ETC.
© 1928 THE CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION, INC.

READ THIS FIRST:

Jill Justin, ultra-modern at 20, and adorably pretty, is kidnapped by auto bandits, but rescued by Jack Stuart, who takes her home and remains to win her hand in marriage.

Three wonderfully happy years of married life are allotted Jack and Jill. At their expiration the young couple find themselves the proud parents of two boys and a girl. Then the Big Event transpires. Stuart and Tony Justin are paid $100,000 for an interest in their tungsten mine by Pat Sweeney, father of Mary, whom he has nicknamed "Mike."

Nita Ravelle, a gay divorcee, and Professor Le Tarte, a dancing man, come to town, each with separate identities. They infringe on the domestic tranquility of Jack and Jill. Later reconciliation smooths relations, and for a time all is well.

Nita Ravelle intrigues Jack's presence with her at a gambling and dancing resort. Jill follows, with Mike Sweeney and Le Tarte, and sees Jack and Nita together.

Nita and Jack start back to town. They are kidnapped and taken to a house in the mountains, where Jack writes a note to Jill, telling her to draw $1,000 from the bank and deliver it to bearer, as ransom for his release. Nita gives her personal check. The house is then locked, and they are left alone for the night. As soon as they are alone, Nita begins to play her game—that of stealing the heart of another woman's husband. When morning comes she has not won.

(Now Go On With The Story)

CHAPTER XLV

But Nita Ravelle made no move toward complying with the suggestion he had offered. She just sat staring out through a window at the side of a mountain, the timbered slopes of which reared up on a 45-degree angle only a few rods distant. His glance followed her around to the window on her left, through which a similar view was revealed.

"We seem to be located in a sort of pocket in the hills," he observed, laconically. She offered no comment, and after a moment he added: "But the question is: Where is it?"

A full minute passed, and still she made no response to his tentative question. Then her gaze came slowly around again, and once more met his. Something, either the faint shadow beneath the eyes or the pathetic droop of the white lids sent a little stab of sympathy for her to him.

"It's a rotten shame, Nita, and I'm darn sorry I got you into this!" He spoke impulsively, jerked his chair around close to hers, and laid his hand on her forehead resting in her lap. The act was bred entirely of sympathy, with no meaning save that inclination on his part to give expression to his feelings.

Whether she understood the motive that impelled him and understanding, resented it, or because she was tired and sleepy and in no mood to pick up the tools of her game, the fact remains that Nita Ravelle deliberately let pass the opening for which she had schemed for days. That person who fully understood women and their whims may explain Nita Ravelle in this instance. She cursed herself later for a fool. At the time she just looked at him and said:

"Yes, Jack, it's a shame. But don't blame yourself. You didn't get me into it. Still it's a rotten shame, as you say. A pitiful, senseless, useless shame. And what's it all about? You don't know; I don't know what I want to know; nobody knows. It's just—oh, piffle!"

And that was that.

Noon came. Luncheon was brought them by a lanky, morose negress, the direct antithesis of George Washington. She brought the tray and departed, and she might have been deaf and dumb for all indications to the contrary she gave. The afternoon waned and waned.

Came 6 o'clock. But no Pete came to unlock the door. Then, at 6:30, there came a resounding knock, and a voice outside the door saying:

"Yassuh, Mist' Boss an' Lady!"

It was the old darkey, George Washington, but he carried no tray. "Boss 'Enry he m' fo' t'ells yuh'uns this away," was the greeting he brought them. And they waited, seemingly both of them, in anxious "rambled around Robin Hood's barn."

It finally developed that "Boss 'Enry had telephoned him, George Washington, to go tell Mist' Boss and Lady," they would be given their liberty providing they permitted the old darkey to blindfold them as on the night before, and then pilot them down and into a closed car. They would be taken to Elliston and released.

Following a ride of some thirty minutes, during which had Jack Stuart but known it, their car was driven out into the country and then back to the town's suburbs, George Washington informed them that they were at Main and Fortieth Sts., and that he would leave them. Then he removed the kerchiefs from their eyes.

"It's a rotten shame, Nita," said Jack.

"Good-bye, Mist' Boss an' Lady," he said, and held out his hand of a hand. "Ah hopes yuh'uns'll shake de hand of an ol' nigger dat didn't mean no harm to yuh'uns on'y Ah jes' hadda go whut Boss 'Enry don't tote me!"

Both Jack and Nita shook hands with George Washington and that was the last time Jack ever saw the garrulous old fellow. He observed immediately that the car they occupied was the one he had rented from the garage the day before.

"I'll drive you to within a block or so of your apartments," he told his companion, without thought of the possible consequences. She offered no comment, either in favor or against the suggestion. All she said before leaving the car was:

"Be careful, Jack, for both our sakes, and don't let any hint slip out that we were together last night. It would ruin me!"

"Don't worry, my dear," he reassured. "I'm going to tell th' truth, but not all th' truth."

After dropping her a block away from her rooms, Jack drove around for thirty minutes, trying to make up his mind on how much of the story to tell Jill. She already knew, he assured himself, from the crazy note dictated by "Enry, that he had been held for ransom. In all probability she had drawn the money as directed. Otherwise, of course, he would not have been liberated. He would simply recite the facts in the case, with the exception of Nita and his part.

Having fixed on his plan of procedure, he drove to the garage, explained briefly that his extended absence had been unavoidable, and started for his home, little dreaming the diabolical mess awaiting him there. To be sure, he was worried in a measure, because he was forced to keep the whole truth from Jill. But he was a sensible girl, and would understand.

Thus cogitating, he let himself into the hall of their apartments. There had been no thought in his mind of slipping in unobserved when he had made use of his latchkey. He just let himself into the hall, where he hung up his overcoat and hat. Apparently, however, his arrival had not manifested itself to any of those in the living room from which came the voices of two or more persons.

The deep tones of Father Ryan rumbled out through the narrow crevice of the door, slightly ajar. Then he heard Pat Sweeney's voice and an instant later Jill's and Mike Sweeney's voices, both ringing at once. It was the startling information contained in Mike's words that riveted Jack's attention and chained him, momentarily, to the spot. Her remark seemed to be addressed to everyone present.

"When we left the cabaret to go into the Casino Nita and Jack sat at the table."

It was the names "Nita and Jack" that brought him up short and sent the blood leaping to his heart. Startled, amazed, he stood there and listened to that which "knocked all his carefully planned story into a cocked hat," as he himself, expressed it.

"Nita Ravelle saw us, I'm sure of that," he heard the Sweeney girl say, and waited in the sweat of a nervous tension as she continued: "But Jack didn't see us, for he was facing the other way. We stayed in the gambling room for about twenty minutes, and when we came out they were gone. Jill had gone out so as to avoid a scene. During the time we were in there she almost broke the roulette bank, winning something over a thousand dollars."

"Which I want Father Pat to take and distribute among his needy ones," supplemented Jack.

"But you don't know positively that Jack went out with the Ravelle woman," spoke up another voice, that of Peter Justin. He continued: "Just because he happened to be sitting at a table with her doesn't necessarily mean that he went away with her!"

Good old Dad Peter, thought the listening culprit, his heart swelling with gratitude. Peter could always be depended upon to speak a good word for the absent one.

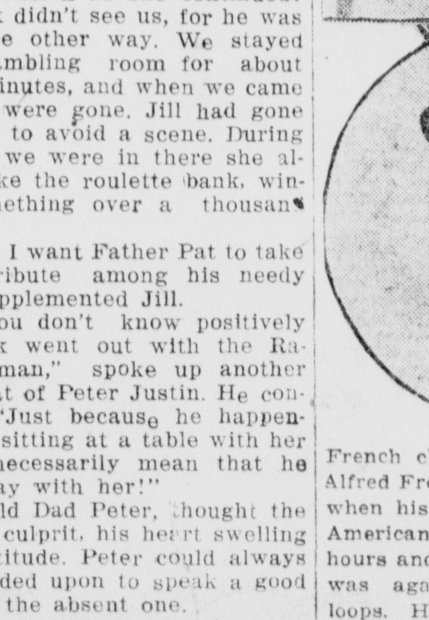

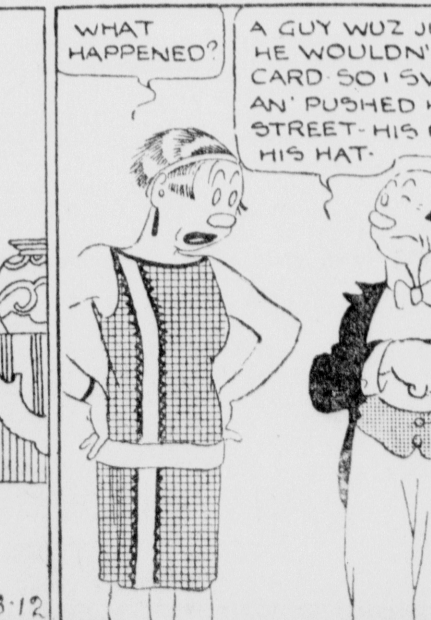

But he, Jack Stuart, was not ab-

The Theater

Is John Gilbert, the screen star, a clothes-horse matinee idol to flutter hearts of women fans or is he an actor? Before Gilbert made "Man, Woman and Sin," even his best friends might have been forced to admit that the former theory seemed nearer correct. Since "Man, Woman and Sin," which appeared at the Bijou Theater last week, even his enemies were forced to admit that perhaps without sacrificing any of his glamour, Gilbert is really an honest-to-goodness actor.

I presume that there were people in the audience of "Man, Woman and Sin," accustomed to being thrilled by the suave sophisticated Gilbert of the past, who were disappointed at the rather mundane role he played in that picture.

But if they had a touch of appreciation for the artist they must have realized that Gilbert was doing the best job of acting that he has ever essayed. Stripped of his worldly, man-about-town glamour, Gilbert was revealed as human. Shorn of his petite moustache and garbed in the habiliments of the common people, Gilbert rose to new heights as a screen player. When such as Gilbert can give such a natural, human interpretation of a role as he did in "Man, Woman and Sin," there is much to be thankful for in the movies.

Speaking of John Gilbert, isn't it shame that he and his lovely wife, the beautiful Leatrice Joy, cannot be reunited? It is reported that they are both still in love with each other, but perhaps neither has been emboldened to make overtures. Miss Joy played here recently in "Vanity," and from the sighs from masculine members of the audience, there are plenty of men to take Mr. Gilbert's place in her affections if given encouragement.

Alimony and attorney fees are sought in a suit filed in Common Pleas Court by Anna Wean, Jamestown, against Charles A. Wean, employed at a tuberculosis hospital at Stillwater, O., near Dayton.

Plaintiff sets forth she was married about twelve years ago and that her husband has abandoned her.

Left without proper food, clothing and a home, plaintiff charges she recently submitted to a serious operation and is unable to work and support herself.

She charges the defendant is employed at the Stillwater hospital and receives $100 a month in addition to his room, board and washing free.

WANTS DIVORCE

Alleging gross neglect of duty, Jennie Jackson, 510 E. Third St., Xenia, has brought suit for divorce from Harold Jackson, 48 1-2 W. Seventh St., Chillicothe, O., in Common Pleas Court.

They were married June 2, 1925. One child, Russell, 1, was born of the marriage.

Plaintiff charges her husband was arrested by Probate Court on a charge of non-support of the minor child and sentenced to the workhouse, but has since been released from the institution and continues to neglect his wife and child. Plaintiff asks to be decreed custody of the child and alimony for his support.

SUES ON NOTE

Suit for $111.06, alleged due on a promissory note, has been filed in Common Pleas Court by Marcus Shoup, as guardian of Elizabeth Ankeny, against S. M. Wolfe, William R. Wolfe and Roy Wolfe. Marcus Shoup is attorney for the plaintiff.

FORECLOSURE ASKED

Two suits asking foreclosure of mortgaged property have been filed in Common Pleas Court by Oliver Parker, one against Hattie Copsey and the second against Nellie Corwin. Marshall and Marshall, are plaintiffs' attorneys in both actions.

HEARING SET

Application filed in Probate Court seeking to probate the last will of L. H. Atkinson, late of Xenia Twp., has been set for a hearing, March 23 at 9 a. m.

VALUE ESTATES

Gross value of the estate of John S. Hower, deceased, is estimated at $46,590 in Probate Court. Debts and the cost of administration total $42,500, leaving a net value of $3,090.

Estate of Frank M. Harper, deceased, has an estimated gross value of $8,371. Debts, including the cost of administration, amount to $4,233, leaving a net value of $4,138.

Gross value of the estate of George Parker, deceased is placed at $4,849, composed as follows: personalty, $3,548 and real estate $1,299. Debts and the cost of administration total $889, leaving a net value of $3,960.

Estate of C. H. Little, deceased, has a gross value of $1,053. Since the debts and cost of administration are in excess of this amount, there is no net value.

NEW BOOKS ADDED TO LIBRARY HERE

During the month of February, 421 books were added to the collection of the Greene County District Library. Of these, 113 were placed on the shelves at the main library, the rest being distributed to the various outside agencies maintained by the institution.

The titles added to the main branch included such important ones as "Brousson's Anatole France, Himself," "New Reformation," Feuchtwanger's "Ugly Duckess," and "Power." Wilder's "Bridge of San Luis Rey" and 107 others of almost equal importance.

A THREE DAYS COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can prevent them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

"AIR TOURNAMENT" FOR MODEL PLANES ARRANGED FOR APRIL 2

An "air tournament" will be held by students of Central Junior High School, for model, miniature airplanes at an "air field" in the rear of the Boy Scout Cabin, Shawnee Park, April 2, it is announced. Seven prizes will be awarded to the winners in altitude, length of time in air and distance flights. Judges will be Purl Cox, of the

J. C. Penney Co., H. W. Owens of the Criterion clothing store and R. R. Dalton, of the F. W. Woolworth Store. Merchants donating prizes for the events are: The Babb Hardware Store, Huston and Bickett, Greene County Hardware Co., Chas. Jewell Jewelry Store, C. S. Frazier Shoe Store, Hagler and Weaver, The Criterion, Sutton's Music Store and Bryant Motor Sales.

In honor of Miss Jennie Morris, Miss Emma King recently gave a luncheon that marks another epoch in Xenia Library history.

Miss Morris, as many will remember, was during her residence here active in library affairs, was in fact one of the charter members of the Tuesday Club, the organization responsible for the founding of the library in September, 1878 and for its continued service during all these years. It was not until November 1926, when the library became a county district organization, that the club ceased to function. Even then it did not cease to have an influence in library affairs for the present board looks to the charter members still for inspiration, suggestions, and constructive criticism.

There were eight charter members of the Tuesday Club, and unusual as it may seem, the original membership changed but little during the nearly fifty years of the club's existence. In the list there were but two changes, Miss Eloisa King became Mrs. Nichols but still remained an active member, while through the death of Miss Isadora King the club lost the inspiration and assistance of one of its most valued members.

At Miss Emma King's luncheon six of the charter members, gathered once more. Present were Miss Allen, Miss McCracken, Miss Morris, Miss Gatch, Mrs. Nichols and Miss Emma King. Miss Ewing whose home is at present in California could not be present. But all the other members now living were there to greet Miss Morris.

Xenia owes a debt of gratitude to these women. It was their far sightedness and their relation to the needs of the people that gave Xenia the benefit of a public library.

PAINFULLY BURNED

Howard Norris, Hill St., was painfully burned when his clothing caught fire after he fainted and fell on a gas stove in the bathroom at his home Sunday morning. Mr. Norris had been ill with grip and suffered a weakening attack. Mrs. Norris found him a short time after the accident, and saved him from being more seriously burned. A physician dressed the burns and Mr. Norris is recovering. The burns extended from his left shoulder down his arm and hand.
